BULLION ROOM OF STEAMER IS LOOTED OF $10,000 GOLD

Mysterious Robber Breaks Way Into Stronghold Of Vessel

NO TRACE FOUND

Passengers Delayed At Wharf While Officers Make Enquiry

PLOT UNSOLVED

Identity Of Burglars Not Discovered By Police

While the China Mail steamer Nile was steaming over the last lap of its trans-Pacific voyage to Shanghai and was on its way from Nagasaki to this port, 40 pounds weight in gold, about $10,000 in coin, vanished mysteriously from the vessel's strong room. No trace of the money has been found and no arrests were made through the day yesterday while the ship lay at its berth at the China Merchants' Central Wharf.

It was some hours before the Nile arrived off Woosung that the robbery came to light and due to the discovery some little inconvenience was caused to the passengers when the ship docked in the river here about 7 o'clock yesterday morning.

TIME IS FIXED

The Nile's strong room was entered between the hours of 9:30 o'clock and 12 o'clock Monday morning and it is regarded as significant that while the room contained no less than 1,765 packages of treasure, running in value into the hundreds of thousands, only the one bulky box of gold coin was taken by the intruder. The strong room is in the central part of the ship on a section of deck from which all but certain officers are excluded. It was found that access to this deck had been gained from the coal bunkers underneath.

The opening of a man-hole from the bunkers to the strong room deck had been forced and after this had been achieved the robber had still to pass an iron door guarded by two stout locked bars of iron. It was a job that called for time and patience. It was found that one of the bars had been sawed through and the lock on the other had been smashed. This lock, it was stated, had not been found yesterday. Careful search of the bunkers of the ship yesterday revealed no trace of the missing gold and how it was possible to remove the treasure at the time it disappeared without having attention from some quarter being called to the box that contained it is a question ship's officers are unable to explain.

NO CLUES FOUND

A check of the contents of the strong room of the ship was made by officers of the vessel between the hours of 9 o'clock and 9:30 o'clock Monday morning in accordance with usual practice. At that time nothing was missing. Three hours later when another visit was made to the portion of the ship where the strong room is located by an officer the discovery that the door of the room had been forced was made and then it was learned that the gold coin had disappeared. While the ship continued on its way to Shanghai a most rigid investigation was carried out through the night Monday. No trace of the gold could be found and no mark or sign that could be construed as a clue leading to a culprit or culprits was uncovered. The missing lock from the strong room door was not recovered.

In response to radio messages that the ship forwarded enroute telling of the robbery police officers from Shanghai met the vessel when it docked. Some little delay was occasioned before anyone was permitted to go ashore from the ship and not only were members of the crew kept under close surveillance, but passengers and their effects were examined before they were permitted to go ashore. Nothing was found.

CHINESE HAVE GOLD

Every Chinese member of the crew of the ship was examined individually and as a result of this a considerable quantity of gold coin was brought to light. The Chinese on the ship asserted that this money was their own property and all uniformly disclaimed knowledge of the robbery. No definite statement

Japs Prevent Union Of Buffer State As Other Nations Are Indifferent

Provisional Government Of Republic Of Far East Seeks Recognition By China; Willing To Revise Old Sino-Russian Treaty

(Reuter's Service)

Peking, August 14.—The following is the third instalment of the report of the Special Commission of Advisers to the Chinese Government on conditions in the North East Provinces and in Eastern Siberia:

The creation of the Buffer State was undertaken by Russians for a double reason: It was both politically and economically essential.

From the political standpoint it was held necessary to establish in Eastern Siberia, where the rural population is not Communist, a government based on universal suffrage and ordinary property rights, and of such a nature as not to arouse the apprehensions of the two neighboring governments of China and Japan.

From the economic standpoint it was deemed just as essential to develop the commercial relations between Eastern Siberia and foreign lands and to facilitate by such a scheme the importation of foodstuffs and manufactures, which in this way might reach central and western Siberia and even Russia.

JAPS PREVENT UNION

Political leaders in Vladivostok do not disguise the fact that this creation has a temporary character and that their ideal is the return to the conception of a greater Russia under some federating act. But this ideal is far distant; for the time being the Republic of the Far East must be taken by China as a permanent political fact. At the time of the Commission's departure from Manchuria (July 12), the Republic of the Far East was still broken up into four parts, owing to the Japanese occupation, which prevented effective union, namely:

1. The region of Verdhne Udinsk, which being in direct contact with Irkutsk, had a certain Bolshevist coloring.
2. The region of Chita, dominated by Semenoff and Japanese troops.
3. The region of Blagovestshensk and the mid-Amur, where a certain number of Bolshevist element still appear to be entrenched.
4. The Maritime Province.

VLADIVOSTOK IS CENTER

Vladivostok, the capital of the Maritime Province, by reason of its commercial and economic importance and the number of its inhabitants, must remain the political center of the Republic. The Provisional Government, presided over by M. Medvedeff, plays a much more considerable role than the Government of Verdhne Udinsk, which is indeed summed up in the single person of M. Krasnochekoff. It should be noted, however, that a complete understanding exists between these two governments. The Provisional Government of Vladivostok has been moulded by surrounding circumstances. Although at the outset it was of a radical-communist complexion, time has introduced milder elements. The new Coalition Ministry, formed since the Commission's departure, has reasonably conservative elements in it.

GOVERNMENT'S PROGRAM

The immediate program of the Provisional Government is twofold:

1. To carry out the complete union between the five provinces of the Republic (Trans-Baikalia, the Amur province, the Maritime province, Kamchatka and North Saghallen).
2. To convoke a constituent assembly from these provinces which will decide, in consultation with Moscow, the final form to be given to the new state and the nature of the bond which shall unite it to Soviet Russia.

The Soviet Government, to whom is due the idea of a buffer state, is working to insure its success. Japan, without today working openly against the Provisional Government, is sedulously seeking to reduce it to complete impotence, in order to secure through her military occupation financial and commercial advantages such as mining concessions, fishing rights, etc., etc., which will give her a dominating position along the entire coast and the Amur estuary. One of the Japanese measures is to limit the armed forces of the Provisional Government in Vladivostok to 2,500 militia, a totally inadequate force, since the minimum required is ten to twenty thousand, there being nearly half a million Russians in and around Vladivostok. Foreign governments, so far as the Commission was able to observe, appear to treat the Provisional Government with complete lack of interest and to be indifferent to the fate of the Republic of the Far East, no doubt because the failure of the Kolchak adventure and the discredit which attaches to them, has politically depressed them.

SEEKS RECOGNITION

The Provisional Government desires to be recognised by China because of the necessity of establishing on a firm basis friendly relations between the two peoples. The views of the Provisional Government are embodied in a memorandum which M. Medvedeff handed the Commission before its departure, which is annexed hereto. The Provisional Government, it will be seen, is willing to revise the old Sino-Russian treaties in a spirit of justice and reciprocity, without asking for such privileges as extra-territoriality and consular jurisdiction. Nevertheless, it is necessary to observe that prior

Koreans Are Accused Of Designs On U.S. Solons

Threats Against American Congressmen Are Told In Report; Suspect Arrested For One Outrage But Others Make Escape

(Reuter's Service)

Seoul, August 16.—The following semi-official statement has been issued here:

"Korean agitators, having been frustrated in all their attempts to incite the populace to fresh disturbances, are now resorting to violence and terrorism.

BOMBERS ACTIVE

"Thus a bomb was thrown into the Provincial Office at Pingyang on the evening of August 3. Some window-panes were broken but nobody was hurt. The bomb-thrower has since been arrested. Again, at about nine o'clock yesterday evening another bomb was thrown, at the entrance to the Shingshiu Station Hotel. A few window-panes were broken but beyond that there was no damage done. The bomb-throwers however escaped.

THREATEN U. S. SOLONS

"The rumor is current that agitators are scheming to make a demonstration on the occasion of the visit of the American Congressional party to Seoul on 24 August and furthermore that a plot is afoot to wreck the train conveying the party, in order to produce international complications. The police are taking active steps to prevent any such untoward occurrences."

VESSEL IS STOLEN

Vladivostok, August 16.—The local Government recently petitioned the Japanese to allow the 900 ton vessel Patrokal to leave port. Consent was obtained and the Government loaded the Patrokal with foodstuffs as supplies for light houses and coastguard stations on the northern coasts.

Last night a band of armed men attacked the crew of the Patrokal some of whom mutinied and joined the attacking party, while the remainder were overpowered and bound hand and foot. The assailants having secured possession of the vessel, she shortly after quietly slipped out of port. The coastguards not being armed, were powerless to detain her.

The Government is taking steps to find the stolen vessel.

Steamship Lines To Increase Rates On September 20

(Reuter's Service)

Seattle, August 14.—The representatives of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha and the Osaka Shosen Kaisha announced today that the trans-Pacific passenger rates would be increased by 20 percent from Sept. 15 under the terms of an agreement between the following six shipping companies, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, the China Mail Steamship Company and the Toyo Kisen Kaisha. The higher cost of food and fuel and increased wages are responsible for the new rates.

IRISH RIOT AT DUBLIN CASTLE TO AVENGE BOY

Soldiers Compelled To Fire Into Crowd When Gates Are Stormed

(Reuter's Service)

Dublin, August 14.—The city was aroused today by heavy firing near Dublin Castle.

A crowd attempted to rush the gates, whereupon the military fired over their heads. The crowd returned the fire with revolvers and wounded a few of the soldiers. The trouble is said to have started when the crowd saw some soldiers, who, they believed, had shot a boy during the recent riots.

London, August 15.—The outbreak in Dublin yesterday reveals a new hostility towards the military on the part of civilians in the capital. In view of the extent of the disorders it is a surprising fact that no casualties are reported.

The new spirit is regarded as pregnant with alarming possibilities.

STONES ARE THROWN

A communique, issued by the Dublin military headquarters declares that the assaults upon soldiers were evidently carried out on a pre-arranged, systematic plan. Individual unarmed soldiers were knocked down, dragged off tramcars and kicked when on the ground. One soldier who was thrown into the Liffey was gallantly rescued by an ex-soldier.

Stone-throwing and revolver firing occurred simultaneously in Londonderry, necessitating the calling out of an armored car. The military dispersed the crowd by rifle fire and a bayonet charge. Six persons were held up and beaten and were removed to hospital.

CONSTABLES FIRED ON

At Tralee, Kerry, four constables were fired on, two of them being wounded. At night the military stores and waggons at Tralee station were destroyed by incendiaries, while the offices of three Tralee newspapers were set on fire and gutted. Considerable firing in the streets is reported.

Yesterday morning there was a sensational affair near Banteer, Cork. The military, guarding a damaged aeroplane, were attacked by armed civilians. Fierce fighting ensued in which one soldier was killed and one wounded, whilst it is believed that four of the assailants were killed and three wounded.

Drop In Shipping Boom Anticipated

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 14.—Signs of an end of the shipbuilding boom are increasing daily. Reports from America show that contracts for 72 ships were cancelled in June on account of the condition of the freight market. Big American yards, which operated fifty slips during the war, are closing down.

According to the Times arrangements have been completed for further large shipments of coal from Australia to Scandinavia, the freight rate being 150 shillings as compared with 175 a few weeks ago. Inquiries are also being made for ships to bring coal from China to Scandinavia.

U. S. SHIPPING REPORT

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, August 14.—The Department of Commerce announces that during the last fiscal year foreign vessels brought to the United States nearly twice the amount of imports, carried in American ships.

SOVIET RUSSIA SEEKS PACT WITH GERMANY TO COMBAT FOR CIVILISED WORLD'S RULE

LABOR DEFIED AS ENGLAND PUTS CHECK ON WRANGEL

Premier Lloyd George Says Government Has Informed Leader That Further Attack In South Russia Is To Be Barred

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 15.—Mr. Lloyd George, in the House of Commons today, said that the Government had informed General Wrangel that, if he made any further attack on the Soviet forces in South Russia, he must do so on his own responsibility.

Replying to a question regarding the labor ultimatum against war with Russia, the Prime Minister declared that any attempt to dictate the policy of the Government or Parliament by industrial action struck at the root of the democratic constitution of the country and would be resisted by all the forces at the Government's disposal.

U. S. NAVY ACTS

Washington, August 15.—The armored cruiser Pittsburg and a destroyer have been ordered to the Baltic Sea to protect American interests. The Navy Department announces that the Cherbourg and France will proceed immediately for duty in Russian waters.

FAR EAST IN NEW TANGLE

Vladivostok, August 16.—The local Communist party has passed a resolution to issue a statement similar to the agreement recently signed between the Verdhne-Udinsk Government and the Communist members of the Vladivostok—so-called—Peace Delegation, (recognising the supremacy of Verdhne-Udinsk in Eastern Siberia pending the holding of a general election, agreeing to Verdhne-Udinsk as the venue of the conference between the Far Eastern Governments, and providing that Verdhne-Udinsk guards shall occupy the railways after the evacuation of the Japanese).

This action on the part of Vladivostok Communists is regarded as sealing the fate of the movement to unite the various Far Eastern Governments and as spelling collapse of the negotiations.

VLADIVOSTOK'S ATTITUDE

Warsaw, August 17.—The constitution of the Provisional government at Vladivostok has been worked out and submitted to the Council of Acting Ministry for approval. According to this constitution the Vladivostok District Zemstvo board has to change its title into that of Provisional government of the Russian Far East. Pending the establishment of the permanent supreme authority in the region, the Local Zemstvo board assumes the powers of acting supreme authority throughout the Russian Far East.

The Government is to be made up of three members at least. In case any member resigns his post in the government, his successor is to be elected by the Local Temporary Parliament from among the citizens who have the right to vote.

REPLY TO AMERICA'S NOTE

Washington, August 14.—The State Department has received the Japanese reply to the American note with regard to the landing of Japanese troops on the Island of Saghalien. It is believed that the reply discusses Japan's policy in Siberia at considerable length. Both notes will be published during the current week.

Work For Soldiers Being Considered By Government

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 16.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Mr. J. M. Hogge, Mr. Lloyd George said that information at the disposal of the Government showed that the high level of employment, shown early in the year, had been maintained and even improved in some cases. There were, however, the Premier added, indications that unemployment during the coming winter would exceed the seasonal scale. The Government was seriously considering the whole situation, including the continued presence of a list of unemployed ex-service men.

New Rank Given Japanese Officers

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, August 16.—The following promotions to the rank of Admiral have been announced: Vice Admirals T. Kurol, Kaneo Nomaguchi, President of the Naval Academy and Shojiro Tochinai. The last-named has resigned his post as vice-Minister of the navy. He will be succeeded by Vice-Admiral Ide.

WAR AGAINST FRANCE, BRITAIN AND AMERICA ON PROGRAM, REVELATION MADE BY WRITER

Associated Press Correspondent Reveals What He Declares Is Deep Laid Plot To Upset Conditions Throughout Universe And Substitute Bolshevism For Present Forms Of Government; Is New Plan

(Reuter's Service)

New York, August 15.—The Associated Press correspondent, telegraphing from Kolno, Poland, under yesterday's date, states that Soviet Russia intends seeking an alliance with Germany for the purpose of making war on France and, if necessary, of undertaking the conquest of Great Britain and eventually America.

He says that he was told by officials of the Bolshevik regime that, upon the conclusion of the Polish war, a note would be sent to Berlin, demanding permission to transport Soviet troops across Germany for a campaign against France.

They declared that, in the event of refusal by the German Government, a revolution would be raised in Germany, which the Bolsheviks asserted they were prepared to assist by force.

GIVEN CORROBORATION

These admissions are corroborated by German representatives of East Prussian newspapers, who have interviewed Bolshevik chiefs.

It is declared that Soviet-Russia will have complete control of Poland within three weeks and that she intends to occupy the Polish section of the Poland-Danzig corridor, leaving neutral that section in the Danzing district. The inhabitants of the corridor state that there has been a rumor that a German-Russian plebiscite will be held. The peasants declare that they prefer Germany.

POLES BREAK LINES

Warsaw, August 14.—An official communique states that east of Chelm—40 miles east of Lublin—the Poles broke through the Bolshevik like at Ignatowa and pursued the enemy to the right bank of the River Bug. The Poles have occupied Doreumusk (?) and Swiezerubieszew.

Warsaw, August 15.—The Bolsheviks launched their first attack on the Warsaw defences yesterday. The attack was repulsed. An artillery duel prepared the way for an attempt by the Bolsheviks to break through the Polish lines near Radzymin. Many of the attacking force were captured by the Poles. The Bolshevik casualties were heavy.

MISS PANKHURST'S VIEWS

Warsaw, August 17.—Sylvia Pankhurst who has recently arrived in Russia, interviewed with regard to the situation in England said that the growth of sympathy with Soviet Russia is being manifest among the more active workmen of Great Britain.

The British sailors and workers refuse to load and despatch ammunition for Poland. The English workers are liberating themselves from the guardianship of the conservative trades union leaders.

Previous to her departure from London, Miss Pankhurst organised a communist Saturday evening working on the same lines as practiced in Soviet Russia.

Reports are arriving from all parts of Russia that the workmen both men and women have decided to make a number of arrangements to the effect of helping the labor peasantry to increase production. To this end the workmen have resolved to work during this month on Saturday evenings and to do overtime work.

ASSUME OFFENSIVE

Moscow, August 17.—In the Crimean sector the Red army has resumed the offensive on the whole front. The Reds have taken Verkhnetomak and Obitchnaia.

On the Polish front the Reds have taken Vladimir-Volinsk, Prasnish, Ostralenka and Sokolov.

The White Guard paper Poslednie Novosti has published an article by Mr. Nolde, formerly an associate to the minister of foreign affairs, in which the latter bitterly attacks the English policy towards the Russo-Polish question.

Mr. Nolde regards with disapproval the mediation of England and accentuated that Russia must be allowed to make a free convention with the Baltic States.

"The Baltic Sea" says Nolde, "does not belong to England. It is rather Russia, Germany and the Scandinavian peoples to whom the control of this sea must belong. The English Brest treaty must be repudiated just as the German Brest treaty was.

Peking, August 17.—It is reported that Canton welcomes the appointment of Li Shun as Chief Northern Peace Delegate and that the Military Government has instructed Tang Shao-yi to hand over the official documents connected with the peace negotiations to Wen Tsung-yao.

Itinerary For Prince Is Still Uncertain

to the convoking of the Constituent Assembly and the working out of those details, to which we have already referred, between the Far Eastern Republic and the Soviet Government, all treaties made by the Provisional Government can only have a temporary character and can only be made binding after confirmation by the Constituent Assembly and ratification by Moscow.

In order to secure for China formal confirmation of any temporary treaties which she may decide to make with the Republic of the Far East, the Provisional Government, in agreement with the Soviet representative, proposes immediate tripartite negotiations, i.e., negotiations between China and the Far Eastern Republic with Soviet representative attending, since in this way it will be possible to secure in advance the approval of the Moscow Government before the completion of the formal organisation of the Far Eastern Republic, and before the fixing of the relationship between the metropolis (Moscow) and the new autonomous territory.

THE MEMORANDUM

The summary of declarations made by Mr. Medvedev, President of the Provisional Government, follows:

1. It is the sincere desire of the Provisional Government that peaceful and friendly relations be re-established as soon as possible between the people of China and the people of the Far Eastern Republic.
2. Although the independence of the Far Eastern Republic has been proclaimed and the general lines of action agreed upon, the final arrangements between Soviet Russia and the Republic have not yet been settled.
3. Until such final settlement, all treaties between Russia and China remain in force, the agreements between China and the Provisional Government are of a temporary nature, subject to confirmation after such arrangements.
4. The Government of the Far Eastern Republic intends to work independently but in harmony with Moscow.
5. The Governments of Vladivostok and Verdhne-Udinsk are acting on identical lines.
6. The Provisional Government does not consider itself bound by any declarations of the Soviet Government repudiating Russia's former treaties, nor is it bound by the telegraphic offer made by the Soviet Government to China on March 26, 1920.

UNITED TO RUSSIA

7. The Far Eastern Republic cannot be separated from Russia as Poland is. The republic remains part of Russia and is successor to all Russian rights and privileges in the Far East. It must remain closely united to Russia.
8. The Republic recognises that the old Sino-Russian treaties contain some injustices towards China, which are subject to correction by a revision of such treaties on the basis of mutual interest and justice.
9. The Far Eastern Republic is prepared to negotiate with China on the basis of justice and reciprocity, and is ready to discuss the questions of renunciation of extraterritoriality rights as soon as China will recognise the legitimate interests of the Far Eastern Republic in the domain of politics, trade and industry.
10. The Republic repudiates in entirety the imperialistic aims of the former Tzarist Government in the matter of the Chinese Eastern Railway, particularly the scheme of colonisation and Russification of Chinese territory in Manchuria through the agency of the railway.

MAKES REQUESTS

11. The Chinese Government must prevent reactionary elements from using Harbin and the headquarters of the railway as a base for counter-revolutionary moves, directed against the provisional Government, particularly by Semenoff's followers.
12. The Chinese Government must protect the life and property of all Russians without discrimination in the Railway zone.
13. The Militia in Harbin and the settlements in the railway zone must be organised under the jurisdiction and disposal of the urban and rural self-government, the latter being reorganised on democratic basis. Presently decisive measures must be taken in order not to permit the Militia to become an instrument in the hands of Russian reactionary groups in Harbin, by introducing in leading positions former Horvath agents, known by their reactionary activity. The Chief of Militia must temporarily, up to the reorganisation of the self-government, be appointed by mutual agreement between the Government of the Republic and China, as the Militia in its present formation absolutely does not correspond to its purpose.
14. The General Manager of the Chinese Eastern Railway should be appointed by agreement between the Chinese Government and the Government of the Far Eastern Republic, reserving one seat in the Board of the Railway to a representative of the Far Eastern Republic.
15. Russia's financial and economical interests, with regard to the Chinese Eastern Railway, must be maintained.
16. A tripartite conference between China, the Far Eastern Republic and Soviet Republic should be held as soon as possible to arrange the basis of future relations.
17. It is desirable to call at once attention to the artifical composition of the newl formed protecting guard of the Chinese Eastern Railway, where whole groups of Semenoff officers are already accepted.

The Chinese Recorder

The Chinese Recorder, August 1920. Published monthly by the American Presbyterian Mission Press.

The current number begins with a striking exposition, based on Scripture, of the lordship of Jesus by Dr. A. I. Robb of Takhing. It would be interesting to hear what those have to say in reply who regard the Christian Church as a democratic institution. Illustrations taken from the government of England would be more fitting, if the fact were not that the English king "reigns but does not rule."

Much more to the point are two practical articles. The first is a symposium, on "Christianity and Government Students," in which are set forth the actual attitude of these students in the various student centers of China. It is encouraging to note that in the opinion of the numerous writers whose statements are recorded, most of the students are decidedly accessible to wise Christian effort. The second article is by Dr. Robert Fitch of Hangchow, and is largely devoted to a statement of the importance and the great promise of "New Methods and Possibilities in City Evangelism."

The study of Chinese religious thought, a department that has been wisely and regularly featured for some time in the Recorder, is as interesting as ever in this number. Dr. W. H. Hudson of Kashing writes about "Gods and Demons." His study has been of the first hand sort and he records what he has himself seen and heard, not what he has obtained at second or third hand from books. Such a study cannot fail to be of interest and service. Particularly interesting is the section on demon possession, and the conclusion which states, "The instances cited and the phenomena under observation do not require a devil in possession any more than murder, theft, or other manifest evils." With this sober conclusion many will agree; and all will wonder what Dr. Nevius would have said, could he have read the article!

In the second article, the Rev. C. Waldtlow maintains the interesting this is that "the ancient religion of China down to the termination of the Shang dynasty (about 1122 B. C.) exactly corresponds to the ancient religion of the Scandanavian countries." Mr. Waidtlaw's detailed comparison is largely based on the history of the Chinese characters, with many thought-provoking suggestions. We must await the conclusion of his statement before passing on its worth.

A brief but interesting description, somewhat haphazard in its choice of details, of the Turki people of Chinese Turkestan, is furnished by the Rev. G. W. Hunter. Under the caption "The Law of Population," the Rev. Evan Morgan provides a glimpse into one of the workings of the official mind in ancient China.

The gold portion of the treasure on the Nile amounted in all to $150,000 all of which is consigned to Hongkong.

Meningitis Cause Of Death Of "Y" Leader In Hankow

Associate Secretary Of Wuhan Branch Succumbs To Dreadful Disease

(China Press Correspondence)

Kuling, Kiangsi, August 12.—Ralph Brownell Colson, Associate Executive Secretary of the Hankow branch of the Wuhan Young Men's Christian Association died this morning at two o'clock from meningitis following an acute infection of the frontal and ethmoidal sinuses.

Mr. Colson left Hankow a little over a week ago on an over-crowded steamer that necessitated his spending the night on deck. He caught a slight cold which may have resulted in the fatal sinus congestion. He was, however up and about until Monday, the ninth, when he began suffering from a terrific headache which heavy doses of opiates failed to soothe. Tuesday the doctors in attendance were not unduly alarmed but planned to remove him to the hospital in the evening. Late in the afternoon a sudden turn for the worse came and at two o'clock he died.

The funeral was held this afternoon from the residence, Bungalow Number 15 d-b. Only near friends were present. The services at the home and at the cemetery were conducted by the Reverend A. M. Sherman of Boone University and Mr. Wayne C. Jordan of the Wuchang Y. M. C. A. Music was rendered by the Kuling Quartette. The services were simple and impressive.

Mr. Colson is survived by his two children a daughter and a son, Sayla and Ralph Jr., two and one years old respectively, and by Mrs. Colson. Mr. Colson's sister, Mrs. Clarence B. Day of Hangchow is now in Mokanshan. His father, Louis G. Colson is Religious Work secretary of the South Bend, Indiana, Y. M. C. A. and his grandfather is still living.

Mrs. Colson plans to return to America with the children as soon as proper arrangements can be made. She will live at her old home in Schnectady, N. Y. where her father, Mr. Walter M. Carr, is living. Later she may spend some time with her father-in-law.

Ralph Brownell Colson was born June 23, 1889 at Osborne's Bridge N. Y. His father Mr. L. K. Colson was at that time pastor of the Frist Presbyterian Church of New York Mills, a suburb of Utica, Mr. Colson graduated from the Utica Free Acadamy in the class of 1907 and entered Hamilton college that fall completing the course with the Class of 1911. LET SLEEPING DOGS LIE, BENSON TO FOREIGN SHIPPING

Effort To Divert Trade From Coast Will Be Met With Full Power Of U. S.

REAL MERCHANT MARINE

Assures Business Men Jones Law Will Be Carried Out Despite Propaganda

Washington, July 1.—Admiral Benson, Chairman of the Shipping Board, announced today that he and his colleagues were determined to build up an American merchant marine as contemplated by the Jones Shipping Law, in spite of threats and propaganda by foreign interests to defeat the law.

He told the representatives of Pacific Coast Chambers of Commerce and trade bodies and American railroads that the threat of foreign carriers to divert business from American ports on the Pacific Coast was "futile and idle."

"If such a threat is sincere and the attempt is made to so divert the business," he continued, "the Shipping Board would allocate American ships to move the business. The Shipping Board and the Interstate Commerce Commission would follow this action," he said, "by other steps which would further protect the interests of the United States against such foreign efforts to defeat the purposes of the Merchant Marine Act."

PREFERENTIAL RATE

Foreign carriers on the Pacific Coast are conducting a propaganda and making threats mainly in protest against enforcement of one section (No. 28) of the Jones law. "Nothing could more surely bring about the enforcement of this section than adoption by foreign carriers of their threat of diverting business from American ports," said Admiral Benson.

"This section of the law permits a preferential rate over carriers within the United States on merchandise moving in export and import in vessels of the United States and provides that whenever the Shipping Board is of the opinion that adequate shipping facilities are not afforded by American documented vessels the section may be suspended, in which case such preferential rate also may apply in connection with foreign carriers."

"As section 28 is to to be used only where there is ample American tonnage to handle the export and import commerce to any particular port in a foreign country, or a possession of the United States, we cannot conceive how any one who has studied this law can assume that the Shipping Board would make any general application of this section," said Admiral Benson. "There will certainly be no enforcement of the provision without concurrent action which fully will protect all American interests."

TO MEET FOREIGN ACTION

Should foreign carriers attempt to divert trade from the American Pacific Coast ports, Admiral Benson explained that section 28 could be made operative. "Then merchandise via Vancouver would neither be entitled to the rates between United States points and Vancouver in either direction on merchandise locally moved, nor to the export rate now applicable via Vancouver."

"There would be required on merchandise moving for export a collection by rail lines within the United States of the local freight charges, such as would apply on a 'like kind of property for the same distance in the same direction and over the same route, in connection with commerce wholly within the United States.' This would be the local change from the point of origin to the border port, which, in most instances, would be 'class' rates. This would make a charge via such routing to Vancouver much higher than the domestic rate from such point of origin to any Pacific Coast port within the United States. Movement through Vancouver would be made impracticable unless in connection with American vessels operating from that port.

COULD INVOKE I. C. C. FAVORS

"Foreign threats and propaganda will fail," said the Admiral. "Those who use such arguments on behalf of foreign interests overlook the fact that the Transportation Act of 1920 has given to the Interstate Commerce Commission authority in 'emergency' to direct traffic or establish an embargo against movements of freight. It also has authority to establish minimum rates on any commodity moving subject to the Interstate Commerce Act within the United States.

"The movement of a certain share of the Oriental business over Western American rail lines is necessary to prevent increased costs of the transportation of foodstuffs between the West and centers of population moving domestically over those rail lines. Any effort on the part of foreign carriers to accomplish the diversion of such business would be undoubtedly considered in 'emergency' under which the Interstate Commerce Commission would act through absolute embargo, if necessary, to prevent such effort from being successful.

WARNS FOREIGN CARRIERS

"Exporters and importers in the United States who have felt the need of an American merchant marine as a dependable agency for the expansion of American commerce and for our military protection have no objection to Section 28. If foreign carriers should divert their ships from American ports such exporters and importers would undoubtedly continue to route their business over American water carriers and American rail lines."

Concluding, the Admiral said by way of warning to foreign carrier interests: "The United States is in earnest in its efforts to place within the ownership by United States citizens the control of at least a part of its traffic in import and export. If it should by any possible means find that the departments of the Government lack such authority as will insure their being able to protect American interests in such control, additional authority will be asked by the Administration and will undoubtedly be granted by Congress. Foreign carriers and those in the United States interested more in foreign than in American institutions will do well to 'let sleeping dogs lie.'"

The agreement between the Hamburg-American Line and the American Ship and Commerce Corporation, by which the former German trade routes are to be opened to American shipping has been submitted to the Shipping Board for its approval, Chairman Benson announced.

Admiral Benson said he had not had an opportunity to go over the agreement, but as a result of conferences with W. H. Harriman, President of the American Company, he was confident that the agreement would safeguard the public interest in every respect and would prove of benefit to the American merchant marine.

Surrendered Anfu Troops Revolt; 50 Captured In Riot

(China Press Correspondence)

Paotingfu, Chihli, August 11.—Looting took place in the East suburb of this city early yesterday morning and the city gates were closed and guarded all day yesterday. They have opened again this morning, however.

At two o'clock in the morning about half of the 15th division broke from camp and attempted to break into the east gate of the city. They failed to force entrance, however, and were soon pursued by other troops who were called out to quell the disturbance. Fearing to face to consequences the soldiers scattered and fled. It is said that a thousand or more made their escape, looting to some extent through the country as they went. About 50 were rounded up and held. Their punishment will be decided by Military Governor Tsao Kun.

The 15th is the division of Anfu troops that surrendered to Gen. Wu Pei-fu at the battle of July 1 near Cho-chow. Their sympathies seemed to be with the Chihli faction rather than the Anfu, so Gen. Wu restored their arms to most of them and put them in the field with his troops, but since they have been quartered here they have been taunted by Chihli troops for the part they took on the other side. This seems to have aggravated them to the present outbreak. The authorities took prompt action, however, and seem to have the situation well in hand now.

Cantonese Send $10,000 To Fund For Flood Relief

In response to the request of the Kwangtung authorities for subscriptions towards the flood relief fund established in connection with the recent typhoon and flood catastrophe in Hokshan and vicinity, the local Cantonese Business Men's Association has remitted $10,000 by cable to Canton.

The call for help was made in a letter from the Shenching Guild. In explaining existing conditions in the flooded regions, the letter states that the dikes have been damaged by the increasing rise in the river and the houses on the lowlands are now under more than ten feet of water. About 70 percent of the houses have been swept away. Previous to the flood a typhoon on July 31 caused considerable damage to the houses and crops.

COX IS COUNTING ON PROGRESSIVES

Hundreds Of Offers Of Support Including Many From Republicans, Received By Him

Columbus, Ohio, July 22.—Governor Cox and his campaign directors declared today that the progressive and independent voters of the country never would accept Senator Harding for President and the platform on which he stands as a leader and a cause for which they could conscientiously cast their ballots and that no statement which Mr. Harding might make would change that condition or remove the stigma resulting from the circumstances under which his nomination was brought about.

This declaration was made while Senator Harding was delivering his speech of acceptance at Marion. Governor Cox said that he would not make any direct reply to the Harding speech at this time and might not answer it until he outlined his attitude on the issues of the campaign upon the occasion of his formal notification at Trails End on Aug. 7.

The Governor supplemented his claim to the support of the progressive electorate by the announcement that thousands of letters and telegrams were being received daily from voters of progressive tendencies pledging their support and asserting that Senator Harding could not, as the representative of a reactionary group of Senate leaders and agents of big financial interests, hold the masses of the voters in line.

"The number of these messages," said Governor Cox, "promising support from progressive and independent voters is increasing daily. The time for congratulatory messages has passed. Now we are getting to real action."

SUPPORT PLEDGED

Governor Cox was asked if messages of this kind were coming to him from Republicans of progressive tendencies as well as from Democratic and independent voters.

"Oodles of them," he replied with a smile. "They are coming from all parts of the country, from the East as well as from the West.

"These voters tell me in a general way that the best interests of the country in their opinion lie always in the direction of press. That is the general trend. The messages have been so numerous that it has been physically impossible to keep pace with them.

"There is no doubt in my mind about how the vast majority of the voters of the country feel, not the least bit of it. The Republican leaders are beginning to realise this fact and are on the run.

"To illustrate this I might speak of a stalwart Republican who called upon me yesterday. He said to me: 'I recognise your confidence in the situation, but don't you think that this is a Republican year?' I replied: 'The Germans were on French soil when the big drive started.'

"I think," added Governor Cox, with a laugh, "that he got my point. The country is progressive and everybody seems to realise it except a few Republican leaders."

In referring to the beginning of the great drive which freed French soil of German troops Governor Cox was thinking about the campaign plans which are being mapped out for him. His managers assert that the Governor will make a campaign of the country which will, for vigor surpass anything which has been attempted by a candidate in political history.

Democratic Platform Most Liberal Party Ever Wrote

Willian Allen White Says It Goes Further In Most Planks Than Does That Of G. O. P; Women Get All They Asked

BY WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

San Francisco, July 2.—And so at the end of a perfect day, a perfect Democratic day of turmoil and riot, we have a fairly liberal platform. The result of the "tumult and the shouting" which Bryan and the Irish have produced may undo the political effect of the liberal features of the document, but as a document the Democratic platform stands the most liberal platform the Democrats ever have written.

In 1912, after the Republican split, there was a lot of radicalism in the Democratic platform to coax over the Progressives; but it was hastily considered, nullifying reservations. Most of the liberalism of this platform today is frankly liberal.

Of course, the Republicans have gone further in the matter of free speech and a free press; but the Democrats have gone as far as they could with Burleson and Palmer in the President's Cabinet.

The Democrats gave the National League of Women Voters all it asked for in practically the language in which it asked; the Republicans did the same thing excepting the demand for the establishment of maternity centors all over the country where women may go at confinement for six weeks. These maternity centers are to have Federal aid, and of course, are to be under Federal supervision and control.

LABOR IS APPEASED

A bill has been reported out of a Senate Committee favoring these maternity centers. But for States rights Democrats to indorse such a plan in their platform indicates how badly they need the women votes. However, it is a good measure.

Labor got what it will take, not all it wanted. But the labor planks of the Democratic platform are more satisfactory to the labor leaders who attended both conventions than the Republican planks.

The Republican planks were written looking largely at the interests of the public as paramount to the interests of labor and capital. The Democratic planks were written looking with a roving eye at the labor vote. But, at that, these planks do liberalise the Democratic platform.

In the matter of Woman Suffrage the Democrats went the whole distance, even to refusing the "antis" a hearing, which is more than the Republicans did. The Republicans in their general committee voted down a resolution to urge the Governors of Vermont and Connecticut to call sessions of the Legislature to ratify Suffrage and put in a "hope" that the National Suffrage Amendment would be ratified. It remained for the National Republican Committee and Chairman Hays and Senator Harding to write the suffrage plank of the Republican platform by strenuous deeds. Observing which strenuosity the Democratic Convention has come the whole way.

In the matter of the high cost of living, the Republican platform recommends as a solution a deflation of the currency; the Democrats blame the Republican Congress, and neither plank brings down the price of anything.

The Democrats demand Federal control of the packers; the Republicans killed that plank in their platform. The farmers got about the same treatment from both conventions, the slight difference being in the language used. The Republicans couched their planks in academic terms; the Democrats were more plain spoken.

PROFITEER NOT SCORED

Each party made faces at the profiteer, but neither has scared him much. Good roads under Federal aid are promised by both parties.

On the railroad question the Democratic declaration is much more vague and generally more liberal than the Republican railroads declaration; the Democrats considered the Plumb plan quite seriously; the Republicans made a flat footed declaration of opposition to the Government ownership of railroads; the Democrats smear some gaudy camouflage over their rejection of the Plumb plan and stress control. But undoubtedly the Democratic position on Government ownership is further to the left than that of the Republicans.

In the matter of corrupt practices, the Democrats took advantage of the tempting opening made by the lavish use of campaign funds by Republican Presidential candidates and the Democratic platform contains a bright, shiny new plank proudly demanding the Federal control of Presidential expense.

For the rest of the platform there are small differences between the demands of the two parties, save upon foreign questions and there the differences are more seaming than real. For after all the marvelous plank of the Republicans which straddles further than the colossus of Rhodes, does take in everything covered by the Democratic platform. The fact that one foot shields the position of Borah, Brandegee and Reed does not alter the fact that the other foot of the Republican colossus touches the position of the President, and while condemning him bitterly, does pledge the Republican Party to a League of Nations which will do all the things which he expects his league to do.

It is all a thundering battle between tweedle-dee and tweedle-dum. The League is safe, whatever happens. No one need agonise seriously over that.

There is, however, a distinct difference in the leaning of the two parties; the Republicans stand fairly upright and noncommittal on liberalism—with shivers of liberalism in the matter of free speech, free press and free assemblage, trading with Russia, giving the Socialists rights to elect and seat their representatives in Congress and the Legislatures; also the Republicans declared for justice of collective bargaining; but after that there is no bending to the left.

In the Democratic platform this "slant" is distinctly noticeable. Sometimes it wobbles, as in the railroad planks; sometimes it rectifies itself with reservations, as in the labor planks which are shuffled in a confusing order, and, sometimes, as in the case of Presidential primary the swing to the left is opportune and accidental, but it is also easily accomplished. This Wilson has done for his party—he has made it liberal where Bryan made it radical; Wilson has rectified the "slant" and made his party as far as possible, considering violently reactionary solid South and rather corrupt urban bossruled constituency, a liberal party.

Thus, the campaign opens with one party fairly liberal, but highly ineffective, and the other upon the whole conservative, with a record for efficiency. Probably the whole issue of the campaign will be between idealism and efficiency. That much must be easily adduced after hearing the reading of the Democratic platform, and listening to the riot thereunto appertaining at the end of a perfect Democratic day.

DETAILED REPORT IS GIVEN OF RECENT KOBE SWIMMING MEETING IN WHICH LOCAL MEN WERE VICTORS

Competition Marked By Departure From Lines Of Other Contests Shanghai Has Entered In Past; Praise For Kobe Contestants

By R. W. McCabe

A general review of the events of the Kobe swimming meeting which was won, both in polo and in the general events by the Shanghai men, is given in a comprehensive report from Mr. R. W. MacCabe, one of the swimmers who represented Shanghai. A report of the first of the two polo matches that Shanghai won, taken from the Japan Chronicle also is given as follows:

HAVE CALM TRIP

The Shanghai Interport team arrived safely on the morning of the 10th inst, in fine fettle after a very calm journey on the Chikugo Maru. They were met by a number of members of the Kobe Rowing and Athletic Club who conducted them to the various billets arranged for them. In the afternoon the team paid its first visit to Mirume, a lovely spot where is situated the boat house and bathing beach of the Club.

The next day saw the opening of the interport contest, the event being a water polo match between Shanghai and Kobe. It should be stated that the conditions governing the whole interport contest were all arranged by the Kobe men exclusively, and they did not follow the lines of former contests between Shanghai and Hongkong at all. Thus, the contest was sub-divided into two parts, water polo forming one and the other events (such as swimming, diving, etc.) comprising the second part.

It was arranged that the decision in the water polo division should be based on the winning of the best out of three games. As regards the other part of the interport, it was arranged that five points count for first place, three points for second and one for third in each of the various events, except the relay race, the side which would win same to be credited with five points that is to say, all the other (purely individual) events were to count five, three, one as above indicated.

INDIVIDUAL EVENTS

Now, as regards the list of events for individual competition, the original intention of the Kobe men was to have only the following: 25 yards, 50 yards, 100 yards, 220 yards and 880 yards.

It will be noted that the above list comprises two events, to wit, the 25 and 50 yards which are not usually included in ordinary championship swimming contests. They form, however, quite normally part of the programs at the K. R. and A. Regatas, and were thus included on the interport schedule. On the other hand, several more regular events were omitted, notably the 440 yards, diving, plunge for distance, throwing the polo ball, breast stroke, and back stroke.

In deference to the wishes of the visiting team, however, the Kobe committee altered the above-quoted list by adding three to diving and throwing the polo ball. It was found impossible to include on the program any more of the events familiar to Shanghai inasmuch as in some cases owing to the events taking place in the open sea it was extremely difficult to get correct measurements, e.g., the plunge for distance, and in other cases it was hard to find time to work in the events on an already overcrowded list of events on Saturday, which was the special day par excellence of the interport contest.

THE EVENTS

The events for each day were then given out as follows:

Wednesday, August 11. Water Polo.

Thursday, August 12. Throwing the Polo Ball and Water Polo.

Friday, August 13, 100 yards, 880 yards and water polo.

Saturday, August 14, 25 yards, 50 yards, 220 yards and diving.

Owing, however, to the easy victory secured by Shanghai in the first water polo game on Wednesday, it seemed likely that they would have also an easy time on the following day, in which case the third match would not be necessary so it was decided to hold the Throwing the Polo Ball competition on Friday, together with the 100 and 880 yards races, and without any water polo match.

FIRST POLO MATCH

From the account given of the first match in the Japan Chronicle, the leading local newspaper in Kobe, it will be seen just what impression the Shanghai men made on the Kobeites. The backstopping of Wallin and MacCabe especially attracted their attention. The local team were rather faster swimmers all round than the visitors, but they were much less quick on the ball, and time after time lost valuable chances of scoring by their inability to shoot quickly.

As Shanghai won the first match by 5 goals to nil, and the second match by 8 goals to nil, they thus secured the honors in the water polo division of the interport contest and now it is a question of the aggregate points which they will obtain in the various individual events and the relay race. At all events they have got the victory in one division.

The goal scorers in the first game were: Wallin 4, Mears 1, and in the second match Wallin 4, Encarnacao 3, Brown 1.

In the individual events division conditions are undoubtedly unfavorable to Shanghai for the breast and back races if included should have gone to Wallin and MacCabe, and the latter would also have been a certainty for the plunge for distance.

The Japan Chronicle's report of the opening polo watch is as follows:

There was quite a migration to Mirume last night to witness the opening event of the first Aquatic Interport that has ever taken place between Kobe and Shanghai. Prior to the game there was naturally much speculation as to Kobe's chances in the water polo match against a team of swimmers from Shanghai, so famous for its high standard in all branches of athletics.

The display of Shanghai was elucidative; Kobe has much to learn in the art of water-polo. Not that they played a feeble game—far from it—it was the extraordinarily efficient and well-trained team opposing them that made the contrast between a first class and a second-class team so apparent. It was indeed an eye-opener for Kobe to witness such excellent play in these waters, for Shanghai, by their perfect manipulation of the ball, their clean and astonishingly powerful throw, was a treat to watch.

Kobe as a team were comparatively good, their speed when it came to a dash for possession compared more than favorably with their opponents, but, unfortunately their passing, although at times very good, was on the whole, weak.

It was the facility with which the Shanghai team as a whole were able to carry out that neat and absolutely essential accomplishment of a polished team, the "backflip." Instead of making a complete turn in the water before capturing and throwing a ball, as the Kobe men were prone to do before getting it clear, the visitors had an amazingly quick twist of the wrist, with apparently little effort, and the ball was over the shoulder in the hands of one of a colleague.

It was the excellent combination that was such a marked feature and, as in all games the team which has the ball swinging has a superiority over the other where this form of tactics is not so well developed. An outstanding exposition of the game was the brilliant and fascinating display by B. Wallin—a master of the game. He is a Swedish International and represented his country at the last meeting of the Olympic Games. For Kobe A. E. James gave a splendid exhibition, his speed and tackling were an asset to his side.

THE GAME

Kobe (Red):—Forwards: P. Houghton, A. E. James, W. P. James; Halfback: J. Helm; Backs: S. G. Stanford (Capt.), J. S. Abell; Goal: C. R. Kerr.

Shanghai (Blue):—Forwards: B. Wallin, E. F. Mears, J. B. Brown; Halfback: R. W. MacCabe; Full-backs: T. R. MacDonald, C. E. Encarnacao; Goal: T. W. R. Wilson.

Referee: W. Newman.

Timekeeper: E. W. Slade.

The game which was due to start at 5:45 was very much later than this as an alteration was made at the last moment, when C. R. Kerr was substituted for G. Amberg in goal. Every credit is due to him for the many fine shots he saved—particularly in the first half when shots at goal came in fast and furious—often at exceedingly close range.

The teams took the water with Kobe playing with red headgear and Shanghai blue. Kobe defended the Boat-house end in the first half. No sooner had the game opened that Shanghai began some clever short passing and the ball was very near to finding the net on several occasions—Kerr saving

JAPANESE TENNIS STAR IS WINNER

Matsubara In Brilliant Play Wins From Sheldon At Cercle Sportif

The replay of the tennis match between Sheldon and Matsubara took place yesterday afternoon at the Cercle Sportif. In the first meeting the play was so fast and so even that it ran far into the twilight and had to be called on.

A large crowd gathered anticipating a rare struggle but it was all over within an hour, and the clever little Japanese player Matsubara won the victory in two clear sets, the scores being 6-2 and 7-5.

Matsubara took the first service and won. Sheldon followed with a game to his credit. The next two games went to the visitor, making the score 4-1. A fine rally in the sixth game gave Sheldon his second notch, but that was the end of his scoring in set one.

The second set was a great deal more even, and the scores 5-5 were called. Brilliant rallies marked the concluding moments of the game, but the final stroke usually went to Matsubara and so with 7-5 in his favor he left the court to receive the generous applause of his many countrymen, who were present, and also of everyone else.

DAVID AND GOLIATH

The game resembled in the physique of the players the fight between David and Goliath, and the victory went to the little fellow. David won because he knew just where to throw the stone. Matsubara won because he stood on the back line and hit hard and sure until his opponent either hit out, or into the net.

Sheldon has a strong serve, much better than Matsubara, but yesterday he played the wrong game. He played into his rivals hands because he played the game at which the Japanese is obviously strong. The winner is a wizard at hitting either with the forearm or backhand Sheldon hit every bit as hard, but he lost point after point by sending his returns well out or by walloping them into the net. When he enticed the little fellow up to the net, and then lobbed over his head he won a love game. But he did not continue the tactics, and that lost him the match.

Matsubara is as active as a cat. He is all over the court. He anticipates a return and is ready for it. On the run of yesterday's play he thoroughly deserved his win. Herewith the run of the games:

Don't you remember some great football game or tennis match, baseball, golf, cricket, rowing, swimming or boxing contest you have witnessed—Some big sporting event in a reminiscence of which our readers would be interested?

Send in your signed story! If you have a picture of the principals, or of the event itself, send it along. Let's make "Once upon a Time" a big Far Eastern feature!

Here's a short reminiscence of what was, to me, one of the most remarkable tennis matches I ever witnessed, played between the greatest of all women champions—May Sulton Bundy and the feminine whilwind from the Land of the Midnight Sun, Molla Bjurstedt.

The match, which was in the nature of an exhibition affair, was played on the unyielding cement courts of the San Francisco Tennis Club, at Scott and Bush Streets, that city, some five years ago, following Miss Bjurstedt's sensational "Clean up" of the leading feminine racket-wielders of Eastern America. Had the match in question turned out as the little Norwegian court-queen expected—and had had every reason to expect—the latter would have undoubtedly assumed the title of world-champion, which May Sulton had relinquished in favor of matrimony and motherhood.

But, as the namesake of a famous cigar was wont to say, "the best-laid plans o' mice and men gang aft agley," and Molla's decline from a position of fixed brilliance in the tennis heavens dated from her meeting with May Bundy on that chilly October afternoon in 1915.

Frankly, I believe that Miss Bjurstedt was quite keen to give the wonderful Sulton girl a decisive thrashing on the courts that day. Molla was visiting at the home of Hazel Hotchkiss, (Mrs. George Wightman) another famous California woman star whom May Sulton Bundy had, many a time and oft, robbed of the chance of becoming a world champion by defeats in final rounds of titular tournaments. Needless to say, the humiliation of her old rival would have been far from displeasing to Miss Bjurstedt's hostess.

With something closely akin to contemptuous pity, then, Miss Bjurstedt booted, clothed and trained scientifically for just such a contest—must have noted the appearance of the cheery little South California matron on the court. For—and the reason I will never be able to completely understand—"Our May" appeared to be garbed, not for an athletic controversy, but for an afternoon tea! On her many sheafs of poppy-gold tresses—contrasting sharply with Miss Bjurstedt's viking shock of hobbed jet-black hair—she wore what we called then a "picture hat" of flimsy white; her dress seemed that of a "Sweet Girl Graduate," rather than a candidate for the honors which were at stake that afternoon; and around her wrist was a pink silk sash, the bow of which never lost an infinitesimal "perk" throughout the long encounter.

Unique as this costume was, Mrs. Bundy topped it off with a pair of dainty high-heeled boots which seemed much better adopted to the floor of a limousine or a dancing pavilion than they did to the uncompromising concrete of the Scott Street courts.

And in her hand the former champion of the world held a racket which looked as though it might have served time with Marie Antoinette and her maidens while the latter were coquetting with history in the grounds of the "Petit Trianon"!

Comes now the story of the match—and I shall not worry you with any of the "terrible details." Suffice that May Sulton Bundy—picture hat, graduating gown, French heels and all—proceeded to vanquish the mighty Molla armed cap-a-pie in straight sets; the last of which (if memory serves) she took at "love"!

Whether the French heels kept the California girl "on her toes;" whether the picture hat as one wag suggested "held her brains in place;" whether the brilliant dash gave her opponent pink eye; or whether the aged racket, builded in Saxon England, was possessed of an atavistic devil these things the world will never know.

The concrete fact remains that Miss Bjurstedt was soundly beaten, when she expected to soundly beat—and I do not believe she ever entirely recovered from it.

As for May Sulton Bundy, she received with becoming modesty the congratulations of the friends who had assembled to witness the duello, and then hurried away to her pet possession, a crowing youngster of two, whom she and her husband (formerly an American doubles champion) confidently believe will be a racket wielder par-excellent before the world has revolved many more times.

REGULARS WIN FROM BOLSHEVIKI IN FINAL GAME OF SERIES AND ANNEX BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

Practice To Begin Today For Big Series That Will Begin With Double-Header Saturday With Teams of U.S.S. Albany And 15th Infantry From Tientsin

By Viola Verclaire

"Trotsky" Dodge's men fought hard for yesterday's game and incidentally the gold plated Gillette razors, but Doc. Downs' crew were also out to win and by driving out twelve safe hits, two of them home runs, were able to bring home the bacon.

It was the best game of ball played between these two teams here this season, being a 3 to 2 affair most of the way.

Cy Wilhoit got four hits out of four times at bat and tied with Porterfield for the cigarettes offered to the best batter on each team by the Westminister Tobacco Co. Giauque got himself in for some of those cigarettes by topping the batters on the Bolsheviks team.

Just Dope

Home runs seemed to be in season yesterday, Porterfield, Cy Wilhoit and Merrill collecting one each.

This man Terry looks better every time out. He struck out eight batters yesterday and allowed only four hits. He has a nice fast ball and a good breaking curve, and certainly will be heard from during the coming series.

Cy Wilhoit certainly went on the war path yesterday, scalping the only four spauldings he had a chance at.

NEW SERIES

Now that the Inter-city series is over the boys will work out faithfully until Saturday, when the big series with the U.S.S. Albany and the 15th Infantry will start with a double header.

Practice will be held today and Thursday at 4:30 p.m., and the Tientsin team will have the field on Friday.

All positions on the team are closely contested for and nobody has a cinch to get into this championship series unless he comes out to practice and make good.

Where Good Dogs Go

In One Cemetery 3,000 Dead Four-Footed Friends Of Man Lie In Well-Tended Graves

Dog lovers have long ago agreed that if the human soul lived after death, the soul of the faithful friend of man must seek its solace in the same hereafter. And many a good dog when he has come to die at his master's feet has some honorable burial and a well-tended grave in some cherished corner of the garden. "Love me, love my dog," it is written. But there are many who have not gardens and who have lost most companionable dogs. For such as these is the Canine Cemetery at Hartsdale, New York.

A little over twenty-four years ago Dr. S. K. Johnson, a veterinary surgeon of this city, while traveling in Europe had it brought to his attention that the foreign capitals suffering in the same measure for lack of space as we did here maintained little private cemeteries for good dogs whose days were done. There was one in Paris, one in Edinburgh and one in London. Dr. Johnson conceived the idea of building a similar animal burial ground in or near New York.

Hartsdale was chosen for its nearness and accessibility to the homes of people who lived within the glow of the Great White Way. Today there are buried there 3,000 dogs and cats—dogs are in the majority—one lion, two monkeys, three ducks, one horse and a number of chickens.

The grounds, which at the present are a little over five acres are a glorious combination of beauty and color and smell and sound. It is a place perhaps more likely to bring joy to living embodied spirits than those that have passed away. Each little plot is laid out in cheerful squares of warm-colored begonias. It seems as though the begonia had been voted the favorite flower of the spirits of departed little barking dogs. The walks which, lined with old-fashioned pink and white rosebushes, Japanese maples, golden-tipped arbor vitae, Colorado spruces, hemlocks, orange flower syringas, add their wealth of color and odor to make the grounds a joy to the senses.

SONG BIRDS ABOUT

Bird baths and bowls of bird seed are placed in unexpected places and scarlet tanagers, Baltimore orioles and cedar waxwings, to say nothing of the familiar song sparrow and robin redbreast, give their own touches of color to the scene.

The graves are laid out in little individual plots, the size of the animal and in some cases the plot varying both with the size of the wealth of the owner. A great many have tombstones placed over them. Here, however, be it said, the wealth of the bereaved has little to do with the expense lavished on beautifying the final resting place.

In one corner of the cemetery there is a wide plot, owned, it was said, by an electrician living in this city. He is not a man of large means. Underneath this plot in a cement vault, dug ten feet below the surface, lie the remains of a dog who had been the man's companion for years. The vault cost $2,000. In it will, in time, be placed the remains of the man's two other pets.

In another part of the cemetery there is a large granite tomb beautifully cut and decorated. This is reputed to have cost $13,000, and holds the remains of two dogs. The plot around it is decorated with flowers and shrubbery. It is a spot such as one might pick out as a show place in a human cemetery.

All of the tombstones have inscriptions on them. The one usually pointed out to visitors and dog lovers rests over the body of Zowie, Mrs. Vernon Castle's dog. The grave of this dog is one of four in a plot bought for this purpose. The inscription reads as follows:

My Adored Zowie.
Died August 21, 1917.
I do not cringe from death so much
Since you are gone, my truest friend.
Thy dear dumb soul will wait for mine
However long before the end.

Near Zowie lie buried Poudie and Punchinello, both dogs, and Rastus, a monkey. Rastus in his inscription is described as "the smartest, most lovable monkey that ever lived."

Perhaps the most attractive spot in this dog garden is a little two by three plot, the smallest that can be bought, at the head of which is a plain little tombstone marked:

Bum—Ever Faithful—At Rest
December 10, 1916.

Bum was a dog who belonged to a night watchman in the coal yards at White Plains. When he died, his master decided that Bum was to be buried like the best of his kind. Unfortunately, however, he did not have the wherewithal to buy either theplot or the tombstone. He came to the caretaker of the cemetery with the dead bundle in his arms, and it was arranged that he pay for both the ground and the tombstone on the installment plan, at the rate of 50 cents a week. Bum's old master is a regular visitor at his grave and there are few who take as much pride in the appearance of the plot as he.

There is another plot, two by three feet, owned by a young girl who works in a piano factory. That, too, it is told, was paid for at the expense of many human comforts that might have made her own life more pleasant.

VICTIM OF A ACCIDENT

One of the tombstones tells of the death of a pet that died in a railroad accident in a manner that reminds one of the following lines about the dog and the engine:

"The little dog was running 'round
the engine,
The engine, it was running through the fog,
Soon there was an awful yelp,
Which the engine couldn't help,
For the engine couldn't run around the dog."

Some of the dead pets have come from as far West as San Francisco. Some of them are sent by express, others are brought to New York by the bereaved owners. Still others, it was stated, have been brought home from Europe, where they were traveling with their masters. The tombstone over one of these, made out of white marble, was imported from Italy.

In the cemetery office the walls are well-nigh covered with pictures of animals whose remains are resting in the flower-covered fields outside. Near the picture of Rastus, the monkey mentioned above, is the obituary of a dog whose name in truth deserves first honor among his canine kind.

The context, typewritten and framed, is as follows:

Who's Who and Why.
Obituary.
Terrier Fido J.,
Son of Rover Terrier and Woofie of Yorkshire
Born Sept. 1, 1912,

After reading this tale of bravery and courage, one can appreciate the desire of the people interested in the cemetery to raise funds to build a memorial to the dogs who died in the great war. It is true, as was pointed out, that the American dogs who gave their lives were few in number compared to the Belgian and English dogs, but the fact remains that dogs did do their part in bringing peace and comfort to the men who were wounded on the battlefield.

The proposed memorial is to stand in the center of the cemetery, which is now being enlarged. It is to consist of a tall obelisk rising out of a broad square base. On each side of the base will be a figure of a dog, standing on the alert, his back against the wall and his forefeet placed well forward. The fund to build the monument is being raised by contributions from the people who have dogs buried in the cemetery and that portion of the public at large which agrees with Pope in saying that "history is more full of examples of fidelity in the dog than in friends."

The money for the care of the cemetery is paid by the owners of the plots. The care of Bum's plot for instance, costs $5 a year. The plot where the monkey and dogs are buried is considerably larger and costs proportionately for upkeep. The prices vary pretty much in the same manner as the original costs, which run from $15 for the smallest parcels of ground to $2,000 for the largest. These sums do not include the burial costs. The coffins, which are made of wood, steel, copper, bronze or concrete, according to the whim of the owner of the pet, run in price from $6 up to the hundreds.

Detailed Report Of Kobe Swimming

a couple of rattling shots by J. B. Brown which were received with well-deserved acclamation.

The first-half was very even and it looked as though Kobe would make a better showing than was generally expected.

P. Houghton at right-forward though working hard and on the whole tacking well, missed several opportunities at scoring. His combination with A. E. James was at times very neat but the passing to this player was carried to excess, for being closely marked by R. W. MacCabe he had little scope to become dangerous. J. Abell is also well worthy of recognition as his play at back saved many critical dashes.

The first goal was registered by Wallin, but could hardly be termed well deserved. He was to the right of the goal-post, and, taking a shot, the ball rebounded from the cross-bar against Kerr in goal, thereby finding the net. This was the only goal scored in the first half.

On resuming Kobe seemed to fall to pieces and the combination which in the previous 15 minutes had been commendable became a negligible quantity. Wallin was left unmarked—an expensive neglect for he had much his own way once he got the ball under way. The second goal scored was shot by Mears, a useful and speedy center-forward, after receiving a well directed pass from his defense line. It was a fiery shot and left the Kobe goalie without the slightest hope. The next of the match was Wallin's; his dribbling and accurate pots at goal piled up the remaining three in rapid succession.

Final score 5-0.

American Woman Doctor Gives Graphic Description Of The Marash Massacre

Assault Came Without Warning As Armenians Were Celebrating Christmas; Turks Kept Up Firing For Three Weeks

BY DR. MABEL ELLIOTT

An American physician, who witnessed the massacre at Marash, Armenia, She tells the complete story here for the first time.

I have been asked to give an account of my experiences at Marash during the massacre and the fighting that took place there.

I feel that no language that I could use could exaggerate the horror of the scenes that I witnessed.

I was in Marash from May 17, 1919, till February 10, 1920, working there on behalf of the American Near East Relief Committee. There were a number of American institutions in Marash, of which the hospital where I was serving was one of the most important.

Each of the American buildings was surrounded by a compound and a high wall for defensive purposes. Indeed, a large proportion of the buildings in Marash looked more like fortresses than ordinary houses. One was reminded occasionally of mediaeval Florence, but the ordinary conditions of life in the Turkish Empire make it even more necessary to build on fortress lines, if one can afford it, than was the case in Italy in the fifteenth century.

NO WARNING

On January 19 we were celebrating the Armenian Christmas. The town was occupied by the French, and I had in my hospital twenty French soldiers who had been wounded in skirmishes with Turkish Nationalists that had been taking place frequently ever since the British went out. On the very next day (January 20) firing suddenly broke out all around the town. The hospital occupied the most central position of all the American institutions, and a machine-gun was installed on the third floor.

I was the only doctor there; with me were Mrs. Power, an American, and a number of Armenian nurses. The first hint we got of danger was when bullets came through the window where the machine-gun was. At the same time a French sentry was killed at the gate, and shortly afterward the machine-gunner was also killed. Firing went on all that night and for three whole weeks afterward.

We had only eight French soldiers under a sergeant as a guard at the hospital; most of the garrison of 3,000 were at the Latin church.

After the first day we did not dare to look out of the windows, as, in addition to promiscuous firing, there was a Turkish house on the opposite side of the road from which we were sniped at continually.

GOT WATER FROM SPRING

At first we were entirely cut off from the other Americans, but later the French made a hole in the wall of the compound at the back of the hospital through which we could climb into a communication trench and so make our way to the American college immediately behind us and to other American institutions.

Fortunately we had plenty of food, the Winter supply having just been taken in, and we obtained water from our own spring. One of the American establishments (the Orphanage) was less fortunate, for the water supply was entirely cut off by the Turks. But one of the Armenians who took refuge in the Orphanage when the firing began turned out to be the builder of the house, and showed them a secret spring. You have to think of things like that when you build houses in Marash.

In the American College January 20 happened to be the day for giving out clothing to the poor, and about a thousand poor people were there when the firing began. All remained and had to be fed for three weeks. Luckily we had some fresh meat.

The French found that they could get no fodder for their mules, so these animals were slaughtered and the meat divided between us and the garrison.

The firing got worse every day. All the patients had to be put on the floor, because of the bullets coming through the windows.

Two American men got in on Sunday, 25th; they had discovered that there were two American women absolutely isolated in an Armenian house nearly opposite, being constantly fired at by the Turks. They determined to rescue them, and managed to do so at night with the aid of a plan I gave them.

TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER

On the 27th the massacres of Armenians in the town of Marash began. The Turks slaughtered them wherever they found them, and wounded soon began to pour into the hospital. Most of them crawled in from the street covered with blood. I remember one poor old woman who was shot through the lung, thigh and ankle, and yet managed to get to us, though the flesh was taken off her knees down to the bone through crawling through the streets.

All through that night we could hear at intervals a thud in the compound where some wretched Armenian had climbed the wall and dropped down inside faint from his injuries. They told us appalling stories of the slaughter of their families, babies killed in cold blood, and other things too horrible to write.

The wife of the Armenian Protestant pastor came in with three gunshot wounds and four terrible stabs, and told us how her two children had been knifed before her eyes. She had another baby, poor woman, as soon as she got into the hospital, and died within forty-eight hours. Her case was only one of hundreds, but I mention it here, as she was a particularly attractive woman, refined and well educated.

ARMENIAN WOMEN RESCUED

In another part of the town we had established a rescue home to receive Armenian women who had been taken away from their families and forced into Turkish harems during previous troubles at Marash.

There were seventy-three of these women in the home, some of whom had been freed by the Turks under the terms of the armistice with the Allies, while others had escaped from the harems independently.

The Turks now captured the place and carried off all the women after murdering the poor old Armenian matron in her bed.

As the fighting went on the French wounded also began to come in and the hospital was terribly overcrowded. We had 250 refugees and about 150 wounded. I was the only doctor. We were unable to use our operating room, because it was in the front of the house and had thin plaster walls, easily pierced by bullets, so we had to start an emergency theater under the main staircase.

The French now took steps to suppress the Turkish house opposite, which was full of snipers. The French fired four shells into it one day, but without much effect. Finally they threw kerosene torches in from an adjoining Armenian house, and burnt it to the ground. We had more peace after that.

On February 9 Captain Arlabose, the French military doctor, came over to the hospital and told us that the French intended to retreat from Marash. We were much distressed and not a little puzzled by this decision. About four days earlier a letter had been thrown over the compound wall, signed by Shukri Bey, an influential Turk of Marash, in which he said: "We wish we could discontinue this fighting, but it is a National movement and we have to await orders from headquarters."

GAVE CHRISTIANS UP

I think this admission may be of some interest in view of the controversy which has taken place as to who was really responsible for these massacres. On February 9 another letter from Shukri Bey, addressed to me personally, was thrown over the wall.

In it he said that he had given protection to thirteen Christian women and five men in his house, but that he had been compelled to give them up to the Turks in order to save his own life, and that he had now no Christians with him.

At the time I was at a loss to account for all these explanations, but have since come to the conclusion that Shukri Bey was frightened, as were all the Turks at that time. In fact, that same night another note arrived pleading for mercy for the Turkish women and children if the French occupied the town. Obviously the Turks expected it. Indeed, next day, when the evacuation was just about to take place, the Turks sent a flag of truce to the American college (I saw it myself) asking the French for terms.

On February 8 I learned that 3,000 French reinforcements had just arrived and were encamped on the plain. But these reinforcements had brought with them the order to evacuate. The Turks, I believe, were on the very point of surrendering, but the French commander was bound to obey his orders. Furthermore, he was short of ammunition.

I will never forget the night of February 9. We were up all night getting the wounded out but there was a terrible panic among the Armenians when they heard of the impending evacuation. People would come rushing in and pick up their relatives, sick, wounded and dying, and stagger out with them into the night to try to join the French.

All except the very ill got away. The wounded screamed to us to give them poison rather than leave them behind. All this time we were trying to get our Armenian girl nurses ready for the seventy-five-mile march to Islahia.

APPALLING SPECTACLE

Next day (February 10) all the serious cases were moved over to the emergency hospital, where the American, Dr. Wilson, his wife and another lady, and two American men had decided to stay with them.

When we got to the hills outside the town we saw an appalling but magnificent spectacle. The greater part of Marash seemed to be in flames, and the French were shelling the town to cover the retreat.

We got down into the plain and joined the column at 2 a.m., and we marched till 3:30 the next afternoon. Then I began for the first time to see people frozen to death. The first was a little child—a girl.

A Snapshot of Viola Carpenter Taken at a Church Fair Where Tableaux Were a Part of the Programme.

On the afternoon of June 1st there died in a Chicago hospital a girl not yet out of her teens. Viola Carpenter was her name. She was the granddaughter of one of the heroes of the Civil War. Two years before she had been the belle of her village of Seelyville, Indiana, courted by many of the country swains for herself without thought of the acreage to which she was heiress. She had left the farm to do war work for her country. In two years she had run the gamut of well nigh every misery and sorrow a girl who loves "not wisely but too well" could experience. When she was taken to the hospital dying from a bullet fired by the lover who had betrayed her the record of her misery was written plain upon her drawn face.

But when she died all sorrow, every mark of sin and suffering had been wiped from that face. She was the clear-eyed, pretty and innocent country girl of two years before! Although the soul had fled, the clay still bore the seal of the happiness the soul had won at last. Those who had known her during the months of her torment looked upon Viola Carpenter with puzzled awe. They did not recognize her. Those who had known her before misfortune had claimed her for its own marveled that it had left no stain upon her.

What had worked this miracle?

Her left hand was clinched even in death so tightly that the fingers could not be opened. What they held so securely was a wedding ring too large for the wasted finger.

It was this wedding ring, slipped on but a few hours before by the lover who had shot her, that had worked the miracle! Viola Carpenter had died "an honest woman"—the one thing for which she had yearned almost since she had left the comfortable old farmhouse at Seelyville. Through two years of life which parallels the melodrama of the old type, she had clung fast to this hope.

That it came hand in hand to her with death took away not one atom of her joy. The wedding ring had wiped out memory of the inferno into which her feet had strayed and had made her for the few fleeting minutes that remained to her of life the innocent, dreaming girl she had been before tragedy, sordid and blighting, took her for its own.

And yet, although there is no mystery now as to why Viola Carpenter found happiness upon a death-bed, there is mystery as to the path by which she found that happiness.

Was the bullet which carried its twin burden of death and joy sped—as both girl and man claimed—by accident or is there another story behind its flight?

Did the man whom she loved so well, whose hand it was that loosed the leaden death, willingly and of his own volition right the wrong that he had done?

Was it that the police believed that in this case the happiness of a dying woman, the speeding of a departing soul jubilant and happy instead of burdened with anguish and shame, was worth more than the cold processes of the law?

Robert M. Taylor, the youth who killed Viola Carpenter, had asserted that his act was the result of an accident. She had confirmed this. It is probable that he never could been convicted of having deliberately killed her. Yet there are lesser degrees of punishment which Robert Taylor could have suffered and which the law might have inflicted if he had not married the girl who had clung to him during those two years of her sorrow.

Here is a mystery which may never be revealed. Taylor has been released; the law has accepted his explanation. What happened during the five days between the "accident" and her death has not been entered upon any police blotter nor is it likely to be. Detective-Sergeant Harry Power, the big, tender-hearted policeman whose wedding ring it was that the dead girl clutched so firmly, says this:

"What happened then was for the Recording Angel to set down. If anybody wants to read they'll find it in the Book of Life—if they get a chance to look at it when they have gone up for judgment."

Here is the story—a page of poignant tragedy in real life. But it is far, far more than that. It teaches us that we may find the purest hearts beneath the most soiled exteriors, the most delicate sentiments in the roughest of men. It brings home the immortal truth spoken 2,000 years ago: "Judge not lest ye also be judged."

Three years ago Viola Carpenter lived on her grandfather's big farm in Seelyville. He was her guardian—her father was dead. She was then scarce seventeen and the old man's idol. Her two brothers had gone to the war. They were fighting on the side of France. Her grandfather, although ninety years old, was sturdy and well. He had won great honors in our Civil War, and it had been stories of valor and courage that had prompted the two boys to take up arms on the side of France.

The same warlike strain was in the girl; and it was fed by the white-haired veteran's stories even as it had been fed in her brothers. Daily she pleaded with the old man for permission to go to France to give what help she could. Steadfastly he refused.

"You are all I have," he said. "I have done my share for the cause of liberty. Your two brothers are fighting, and your place is here with me."

But when the United States entered the war, his viewpoint changed. There came to her an opportunity to work for her country and yet not be separated too far from her grandfather.

She was offered a fairly responsible position with a firm at Akron, Ohio, which was then manufacturing balloons for the United States Government. It was really war work, and this time her grandfather consented to let her go. At the factory in Akron she met Taylor, a nice-looking, gentlemanly youth not many years her senior. She asked him why he was not in the trenches, as her brothers were. He told her that he had tried to go, but that he had been rejected as unfit for active service. He deplored this greatly, but he was doing all he could, he said, for his country. She sympathized with him. And soon her pity grew into love.

There came a night when he proposed marriage to her. Happily she accepted him. They could not be wedded at once, Taylor told her, because the work that he was doing through patriotism would not permit him to support two. She had only what money her grandfather gave her and Taylor did not want her to let the news of their engagement be broken as yet either to their friends or to the old veteran. He wanted to support her himself, he said, and as soon as the war was over he could get remunerative work.

The girl did not quite understand, but she loved so much that she was willing to accept her lover's command. To prove his sincerity he took her to the marriage license bureau and obtained a license to wed. They They then both returned to their work with no apparent change in their attitude toward each other— at least to outsiders.

But when the war ended and she was dismissed from the factory Taylor did not marry her.

And now she could not go home to face the old grandfather who loved her so well!

With Taylor she went to Chicago. He tried one position after another and soon left each. He drifted steadily downward, she following sorrowfully in his wake. Daily she pleaded with him to marry her. He put her off with one excuse after another. At last her love carried her to the very depths. Taylor became a waiter in a resort south of Chicago which, through the character of its habitues, is locally known as "the Bad Lands."

She went with him and to remain close to him became a dancing girl in the same place.

Here she mingled with the vicious, the depraved, the very dregs of the great city to the north. It is a perpetual miracle what a woman will do for love. No greater contrast to the peaceful, clean life of the big farm than the scenes in which now she moved could be imagined. She clung to Taylor and his promise to marry her as the one thing left to her in the world.

But this same love did not make her a very successful dancing girl in such a place. Nor was her face and behavior such as to make her popular with the patrons. And continually she begged Taylor to gather himself together, marry her and take the upward path to the old, clean, honest life.

Then came the accident in which she was shot by Taylor.

To the case was assigned Detective-Sergeant Harry Power, a big, tender-hearted, understanding Chicago policeman. The shooting had occurred in an apartment where the two were living. Power found Viola Carpenter half conscious upon the bed and blood streaming from her side. Taylor was there, too. He said at first that the girl had shot herself. She was unable to talk and, naturally, her lover was at once placed under arrest. But Power was dissatisfied with Taylor's explanation of the attempted suicide, and for two days while Viola Carpenter hovered between life and death he hammered at Taylor for the truth.

At last, the police say, Taylor admitted he had shot the girl, but doggedly clung to the story that it was an accident. He said he had been looking for a burglar and had pointed the gun at her, thinking it would not go off. He added they had been married for two years and were very happy together.

The girl took a turn for the worse. At the hospital they told her she was dying and she asked to see Sergeant Power. The detective felt a personal responsibility in the case. He knew something of the man's associations. And the girl could not be more than nineteen.

When he reached Viola Carpenter's bedside he told her she was about to die and urged her to reveal the details of the shooting. She considered a moment, then asked for Taylor's explanation of the affair. Power told her he had said it was an accident and that he had shot her while demonstrating what he would do to a burglar. She asked to see his signature to that statement. Power produced it.

"If that's what he said," the girl whispered, "that is the truth."

She lay for a moment in silence. Then: "Have you been married long, Sergeant?"

"Twenty-seven years," replied the policeman.

"You can help me," said the dying girl. And reaching under her pillow she drew forth a tattered piece of paper.

"We got this a year ago," she said; tears began to roll down her cheeks. "It is our wedding license."

The pain caught her and she clung to the bed.

"When he told you we were married, it was a lie," she murmured at last. "He promised to marry me, and I have begged him to every day of the two years we have been together. Something has always interfered. Once we were going to get married in a church in Akron. But on the day before the wedding he didn't have enough to pay the minister and it fell through. And that is the way it has been every time."

Little by little then she told the entire story that has been related.

"Now I am dying," she told Sergeant Power. "But I love him and he loves me! There is one thing I am trying to rescue from my shipwreck. That is my honor. If I could die an honest woman I would die happy.

"I have always prayed, Sergeant. I knew what was right and didn't do it. But that was because I loved him. Perhaps I can do the right thing, after all.

"There is the marriage license. I've carried it inside my blouse for nearly two years. Ask him if—tell him—just ask him if he'll use that license now!"

The detective smoothed her hair and left the room. Later that afternoon he returned to the hospital with Taylor shackled to his wrist. Outside Viola's ward he stopped and unlocked the handcuffs.

"You are going to walk in there like a man," he said. "And to her you're going to act like a man. You understand?"

Taylor nodded and walked into the room. Sergeant Power closed the door and remained outside.

Soon the Rev. Father William Plunkett, of St. James's Roman Catholic Church, was summoned by the detective. Together they tapped on the door and entered the room. Taylor was kneeling by the bed side, his arms around the girl. Both were sobbing. The girl cried out with joy when she saw the priest. She talked excitedly as he slipped on his surplice and stole and said she wished to be baptized in Taylor's faith and married.

"We're going to be married!" she repeated over and over. "We're going to be married!"

Sergeant Power stepped back with the doctors and nurses who had collected near the door. A moment later he came up again and with difficulty removed the wedding ring that had not left his finger for twenty-five years. Silently he handed it to the priest.

Father Plunkett kissed the crucifix he wore about his neck and anointed Viola Carpenter's forehead.

Again Taylor knelt by the bed. The girl placed her hand in his. The silence in the room was broken by the voice of the priest.

"Do you take each other for husband and wife, to have and to hold, in richness, in poverty, in sickness and in health"—and then his voice broke a little as he added:

—"until death do you part?"

The girl sobbed that she did. The priest pronounced the two man and wife, and then went on, giving the sacrament of extreme unction. Presently he was done, and bestowing a last blessing tip-toed with the rest from the room, closing the door.

In an hour Sergeant Power rapped again and entered. They were as he saw them last—praying. Her left hand was closed to keep the ring from falling off, it was so large.

Power motioned and Taylor kissed her again and started out. Half-way out she called him back.

"Remember," she said, "remember, Bob, it was an accident."

Her hand was still closed on the ring when she died a few moments later.

She told a nurse it was probably well that she must die—that she had her honor back.

That is what her aged grandfather said, too, the next day when he came to claim her body.

She was buried with the dead hand still clasping tight the wedding ring.

Taylor was released—by the law

Sovereign Usurpation

(Contributed)

IN the words of the song "Am I dreaming or waking, Oh Angel divine?" This as a result of a recent journey in Manchuria which is supposed to be an integral part of the Chinese state. What was observed there give one pause to think and ask oneself questions. Has the past six years been an actuality or only a dream? Is it true that the allies who sacrificed most came out of the war so beaten that they have been relegated to the position of second class powers and there is only the predominent power left in the world to dictate to all others? Is that one power Japan? Did Japan during the war establish such a dominant military position that she can dictate to and defy her recent allies? Has Japan established such a superior position in the east that she can treat Europeans and Americans as inferior peoples? Has she established, despite her official denials, a suzereignty over China and China's territories?

It would seem that in Manchuria Japan is believed as the greatest victor of the Great War, having emerged therefrom with powers that Germany in her maddest moments never contemplated. Japan's attitude in Shantung is ever more aggressive. All remarks herein made regarding Japan in Manchuria apply with greater force to Japan in Shantung. Whatever the statements made in the Japanese diet may be in regard to Japan's friendly attitude towards China and the staunch upholding of the open door policy, those statements are immediately set at naught by the Japanese brass button brigades which now over run Manchuria and Shantung. By the actions of these forces in brass buttons Japan is placed in the position of claiming the dictatorship of the Far East. Japanese officials of course deny this but what is the use of a Japanese denial?

Japan's present attitude in Manchuria is based upon the Russo-Chinese treaty of March 27, 1898, anent the lease by Russia from China of Port Arthur and Tailenwan, together with the adjacent seas on the understanding that such lease "shall not prejudice China's Sovereignty over this territory." The duration of the lease according to the agreement was to be twenty-five years, in other words until March 27, 1923. Japan took over from Russia by the Treaty of Portsmouth Russia's rights and obligations under that lease. One of the obligations, a very important obligation, of that lease agreement was the respecting of China sovereighty in the leased territory and along the branch line between Harbin and Port Arthur which the said agreement permitted to be constructed.

Japan ever since she took over Russia's lease has jettisoned all her obligations under the agreement. She has ignored the sovereignty of China and by the action of her officials, for whom the Japanese government is responsible, she has set up the sovereignty of Japan in the sovereign state of China.

It is the sovereign right of China, through China's duly appointed officials, to examine all foreigners' passports be they Japanese, American or European travellers within Chinese territory. No sane person would ever attempt to dispute China's right officially to examine their passports or obtain from them any information consistent with the requirements of the country in connection with the objects of travel. Japan has usurped the sovereignty of China in this respect, but not at the request of China or for China's convenience. China strongly resents this impertinent assumption of her sovereign right by Japan. Chinese officials repudiate ever having conferred on Japanese officialdom any such sovereign status. Neither at Talienwan (Dalny) nor Port Arthur, has Japan any right to question travellers as to their nationality, name, date and place of birth, profession, trade or occupation, their destination and object of travel nor have any travellers any obligation to answer these grossly impertinent questions unless the Japanese who may ask them happens to be an employe of the Chinese customs and asks these questions in the name of the sovereignty of China and not of the sovereignty of Japan. This statement holds good to the similar condition of things at Tsingtao.

Let us take the position of the Central Manchurian Railway, part of which is now the South Manchurian Railway. Read article VIII of the Russo-Chinese Railway Agreement and there the reader will find: "The Construction of this line shall never, however, be made a ground for encroaching on the sovereignty or integrity of China." That clause definitely sets a limit upon the powers of Japanese officials, be they soldiers or gendarmes, on the South Manchurian Railway. They can do nothing to impede the movement of Americans and Europeans who may wish to travel in Manchuria whether those Americans or Europeans have the right to travel or not. Their right or otherwise is no concern of Japan or any Japanese official and any interference with them on the part of any representative of the brass button brigade is an impertinent assumption of Japanese sovereignty in Manchuria and an insult to the governments of the nationals with whom they interfere.

Be it remembered "obstruction of travel, inconveniencing of travelers, examination of passports, questioning of travelers as to personality, trade, etc. and object of travel in Chinese territory is alone the prerogative of Chinese sovereignty. If this prerogative of sovereignty is denied China and usurped by Japan then the territorial sovereignty of China in Chinese territory is denied to China and usurped by Japan. There are no two ways about it and the sooner the present usurpation is put to the test the better for China and all friends of China.

The Japanese interlopers on Chinese sovereign territory cannot be too soon brought to book taught their proper place and prevented from further interference with Chinese sovereignty. The condition of things on the Shantung Railway is worse than on the South Manchurian Railway and with less semblance of right. There was no bungling Portsmouth Treaty to alienate the Shantung Railway as was the case with the South Manchurian Railway. Japan's position on the Shantung Railway is solely that of a usurper and the nations who cry out for the rights of small nations have a moral obligation to bring that usurpation to an abrupt end.

Japan may be readily taught a lesson in connection with her passport policy by turning her own methods against herself and her citizens. If the counties of America and Europe, who have suffered the passport annoyance at the hands of Japan, only insisted on Japanese travelers displaying their passports and Japanese residents displaying their registration papers at all and sundry hours of the day and be made to give full answers to the same monotonous questions as to personality every hour or half hour, the Japanese Government would soon stop the annoying practices. American and European shipping companies can start on their own behalf the passport and information annoyance of Japanese in the same way that the Shantung and South Manchurian Railways annoy America and European travelers. Bumptious Japan and still more bumptious Japanese officials have got to learn many lessons. This is one of them. Another is that her actions and those of her officials are making her the most hated nation on earth. She must learn the lesson that her methods and actions in China, not only are intolerable but that they are internationally illegal.

ABOUT CATS, DOGS—AND WOMEN

You can't train a woman or master her,
And no more can you train a cat;
If you are a man of experience,
You'll agree to the truth in that.

You may make a cat purr,
If you are kind to her,
And feed her fried fish and cream;
Yet you are not sure quite,
When she may scratch or bite,
For she's treacherous and mean.

You can't make a cat of real use to you,
Excepting to slay a stray mouse;
Like your bric-a-brac and your unread books,
She's mere ornament in your house.

But your dog you can tease,
Just as much as you please,
And make him cringe at your will;
Yet he remains your friend,
To the bitter last end,
And you know he loves you still.

When you're wearied with care and all's gone wrong,
Is it your cat that licks your hands?
Does she fondly lay her head on your knees?
Do her eyes say she understands?

Not that woman's a cat,
I need not imply that—
I'm writing but to amuse;
With a dog I'd not care
The sweet things to compare—
You may do so if you choose.

But were Kipling writing these rhyming lines,
At the end he might spring this joke:
"For a woman is only a woman—
But a good cigar is a smoke."

SUN HUNG-I TO TAN YEN-KAI

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir: I shall be much obliged if you be kind enough to publish my enclosed letter to Mr. Tan Yen-kai, Governor and Commander-in-chief of Hunan. I am, Dear Sir,

Yours faithfully,
SUN HUNG-I.

(ENCLOSURE)

Telegraphic reply to Mr. Tan Yen-kai, Governor of Hunan: By your telegram, dated 22nd instant, deeply discussing the seeds of the repeated troubles of our country and the true ideas of autonomy, you strike the very points and say out what the people have not yet said. On learning from it that you have decided to take the lead to establish an elective government in Hunan, I, for the sake of the future of our Republic, am exceedingly glad, because the federal system long entertained in our thoughts can be carried out today.

In the Constitutions of foreign countries many provisions are based on facts, therefore they can be enforced without impediment. Local self-government had been long adopted in the thirteen founding states before the American Constitution was formed. After the overthrow of the late Manchu Dynasty the voices for re-construction and a federal system were heard. The proposers, wished to make up a new fact by an unsupported law while the opposers resisted their voice by the force of the existing old facts. The stubborn struggle of these two parties resulted in successive dissolutions of the National Assembly and repeated civil wars which, simply speaking, are disputes about a federal system only.

Now that you take the lead to make a trial of elective government partly based on the "Local system draft of the Constitutional conference," you are taking a step compatible with foreign precedents. How to establish a best possible system is a question of the future, but for the present, I should say that the advocate of a local government by the people to administer local affairs is the best method of smoothing over trouble and bringing about peace, because the root of a republic is the people. Our people used to fascinate themselves by the saying that a country was to be settled by one man, but we have seen, when our vast territory and dense population were given up to the mercy of the unsupported central government, not only the local interests could not be freely developed but also the state was daily approaching complete collapse. This is the reason why we formerly opposed the late Yuan Shih-kai and now fight with Tuan Chi-jui and Hsu Shih-chang.

Shu Shih-chang is still usurping the government and wishing to follow the late Yuan Shih-kai's example to put the whole realm into his purse under the cover of peace and unification, while the people and land are respectively under the butchery and partition of the officials and militarists he, by virtue of his high position tries to control them at his pleasure. The young buds can never grow if the weeds around them are not totally cleared.

Therefore the only course left to those who support autonomy is to use their righteous military force to push on their principle. I think there is no other man than you who will undertake the burden of eradicating the bad weeds and sowing the good seeds.

Furthermore, I should say that an elective provincial government is still far from being in touch with the people, though it is an urgent matter of the present day. What are called "local" are really the city and the village which are in close touch with the people. The local developments of America depends upon the elective system of the city governments and the extension of civil administration into the lowest section. Since you are determined to make a thorough reformation, I hope you will readily abolish the appointment system of the magistrates and let the local inhabitants organise their own city government. Then the city and provincial elective government of your province will stand out as models for the whole country, and the principle of local self-government in our country may be carried out in full.

SUN HUNG-I.

'Influence Of Foreign Education In Chinese Homes'

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir: The interesting discussion proceeding under your auspices on the subject of foreign influence in Chinese homes has so far been centered upon one feature of home life—viz., the relation between husband and wife. Nevertheless, there are other elements that enter into the constitution of a happy home which are no less important and which, moreover, foreign influence may do much to improve.

Under our peculiar family system, cases of domestic tragedy arising out of unhappy marriage are at least paralleled in number as well as in magnitude and intensity by those engendered from the unhappy relation between sons and daughters and daughters-in-law and their parents. It would appear incredible to those other than the de facto observer that the long-esteemed virtue, filial piety or "shao" could distort the natural love of parents and children into a mostly ugly and pretensive rite. It would be blasphemous to state that the ancient saints and sages, drunken in profound erudition, who dictated minute laws that are to govern the daily actions of their children thousands of years after, have defiled the purest fountain of human love. But "shao" has been carried too far: instead of being observed as a moral law by those for whom it was enacted, it has been twistedly used as an instrumentality for extortion by those to whose interests it redounds.

Most intense is the mental and physical suffering of those who are the unhappy victims of this traditional evil. As elsewhere in Chinese customs, it usually falls to the lot of woman to suffer for what the stronger sex has blindly written in the sacred volumes. Brought up in all the ancient exalted stories of "shao," parents would consider their exactions from children as liberal. The affliction is rendered all the more acute by family injustice which invariably exists in homes of the type in question. While daughters and daughters-in-law are forced to the slavish labors with often cruel treatment, certain of their brothers are pampered beyond all reasonable limits. This, too, is done at their expense; and they have to serve these favorite brothers, and their whims and idiosyncracies which are the peculiar assets of spoilt children.

I know of one family which sent its daughters to the aunts to bring them up in the country; but their parents recalled them as soon as they were big enough to do domestic work. They are never sent to school, though they earnestly long to go. And this in a most respectable family, extolled by many, for its strict "family discipline!" Society sanctions this form of injustice in the family, though not elsewhere. To rebel against established custom few would hazard; accordingly they succumb to it as a matter of course, only to wait and seek atonement at the expense of their succeeding generations. Men are born slaves of their parents, to be enslaved or pampered according to the whim of their creators: this is filial piety!

Without disparaging the illuminating virtue, "shao," of the ancients, respecting its essence not its form, we venture to suggest that parents be more impressed with the idea that they owe an obligation to every child they give brith to—to feed and clothe and educate. It is a tender and difficult task, to be sure; and all honor and gratitude are due to the successful parents, not only from their children, but also from the nation at large. It is a moral and, I might say, legal obligation. Sweep the ceremonial "shao" aside; let love and not fear dominate our home life, and blessings and happiness which not even the promises and laws of the delusive sages have bestowed shall flow forth in abundance.

Thanking you for your space, and enclosing my card, I am,

A Missionary University Student.

Too Much Money

You Might Not Suspect It

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

Lord d'Aberdon, a Jew, formerly known as Sir Edgar Vincent, one that really understands finance—he probably understood it in the cradle—tells the world truly that prices have gone up, not so much because of profiteering, as because the presses of the world have been turning out paper money until there is much too much of it.

Francs and lire are worth less, because there are more francs and lire than the world ought to have circulating. England resisted the temptation to start her money presses, so her money retained its value fairly well.

To understand the situation, go back to the Narraganset Indians, who made money of sea shells, taking a little white piece from the center of a large conch, a little purple piece from the hard clam and stringing the pieces.

That was real money in those days. Even the whites, early in the Eighteenth century, as you gather from the learned editor of the Detroit News, paid taxes and their passage on the ferry between New York and Brooklyn, with the Indian shell money.

If the Indians had invented such a machine as they use in Pittsburgh to make nails, and had hammered out their money "wampum" by carload, how much do you think wampum would have been worth?

The trouble isn't so much that goods are dear as that money is cheap.

So says the British authority. It seems reasonable until you try to borrow at the bank.

The Figure Wizard

Although only a child of eight, Zerah Colburn, a native of Cabut, Vt., showed his exceptional fondness for figures and for mathematical problems early in life. His father, who had not given him any other instruction than that which might be obtained at the small, remote country school, was amazed to hear his six-year-old son repeating the products of several numbers. He then propounded a number of complicated arithmetical problems, all of which the child solved with remarkable facility and correctness. Before he was eight, the child was taken on a tour of the eastern part of the United States and was then taken to England, where he appeared before the members of some of the most famous college faculties, surprising them all with his instant and accurate solution of all the questions they put to him.

At a special meeting, held for the purpose of testing the mind of the American prodigy and discovering wherein lay the trick, Zerah confounded all his questioners by raising the number 8 progressively up to the 16th power and, in every result—even the last one, which contained 15 numerals—he was correct in every figure. He was asked the square root of 106,929, and before the number could be written down, he replied "Three hundred and twenty-seven." He was then required to name the cube root of 268,336,125 and, with equal facility and promptness, answered, 'Six hundred and forty-five." One of the professors present, asked him how many minutes there were in 48 years. Before the question could be recorded Zerah gave the correct answer—25,228,800, adding the information that there were 1,513,728,000 seconds in the same space of time.

As the result of these and a number of other tests all present were forced to admit that the child possessed a marvelous natural gift for figures, transcending anything that education could teach him.

Democratic Government

What is the best definition of, or recipe for, really democratic government?

Our friend, W. J. Byars, says the recipe is found in these words from Thomas Jefferson's first inaugural address:

"Still one thing more, fellow citizens, a wise and frugal government which shall restrain men from injuring one another and leave them otherwise free."

Have you any better definition of what democratic government ought to be?

It is not easy to provide the "frugal government," but it ought to be possible to leave men free, as long as they do not injure one another.

The trouble is that the first instinct of a man who gets power is to use it to take freedom away from somebody else.

These are days of prevention.

In the line of "prevention" did it ever occur to you how much Mr. Rockefeller did when he gave millions to education?

"Give light," said Dante, "and the people will find their own way."

Mr. Rockefeller lighted a seven or ten million dollar lantern of knowledge in the Chicago University. That will give light, and information—including the information that the people are able to own and manage their own property, and the further information that the way to pay for what the nation needs is to tax wealth to pay for it.

Generations to come will say of Rockefeller "he laid the cornerstone of public ownership by proving that competition was wasteful and unnecessary.

"He spent his money on education and thus helped forward the day of real democracy. An educated race will protect itself."

"He saved millions of lives by fighting disease scientifically."

Raised With Care

(From The Philadelphia Bulletin)

The business man had decided to try an office girl and was interviewing applicants for the job.

He eyed rather suspiciously a fair young thing who wore a somewhat flimsy silk blouse and a lot of gaudy "jewery."

"I—er—hope you were carefully brought up?" he stammered nervously.

Oh, yes, thank you," replied the damsel; "I came up in the elevator."

It All Depends

They say Vice Presidential Candidate Coolidge picks out his wife's clothes. If she lets him, that is one thing; but if he insists on doing it he has lost the woman vote.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

How To Keep Cool And Fresh

"Phew! Isn't it hot?" How often do we hear people say this during the trying days of summer. We all have friends or acquaintances who suffer incredibly during such a time. Men especially may be seen with perspiration bursting through their coats, beads of sweat on their brows and a hankerchief which alternates between their foreheads and the back of their necks.

With women it is not too noticeable but undoubtedly the majority of them are glad to get away to the hills, or by the sea, where they revive like parched flowers after a sprinkling of water. Now most of the tiredness which comes to many persons in the summer and a great deal of the perspiration may be avoided by a little common sense and just a little restraint. The latter is necessary in our methods of eating and drinking. If we want to be cool we should drop out foods which contain a lot of fat or starch. Porridge of any kind, puddings, sugary foods, should not be eaten and if we are big bread eaters then the consumption must be decreased.

For breakfast one or two eggs cooked in the way you like best followed by a little fresh fruit. If the latter is not available the tinned fruit can be taken though it is not so beneficial. Plenty of fruit of the acid variety, oranges, apples, lemons, and pineapple dipped in boiling water for a moment and cleansed properly are fine. Bananas, dates, prunes, and figs are heating and should be taken sparingly. In cases of constipation, however, these fruits are excellent both for adults and children. Dates, prunes and figs can be simmerred in a casserole and the juice alone taken if preferred.

Coffee, tea and cocoa are stimulants and therefore heating so are better left alone. In the case of a person who has been a habitual user of tea or coffee and who might suffer were he to stop his favorite drink entirely the amount could be reduced gradually. Whiskies, beer, wine, and liqueurs, should be reduced or abstained from completely.

Lunch should be of fruit or a drink only would be beneficial. A person used to the noon meal who omitted that would probably have a craving for the first few days but the desire would disappear within a week and in any case the benefits far outweigh any disadvantages caused. A stomach rest like this is of the greatest assistance to the body. The dopey, heavy feeling you used to experience after lunch will give way to a fresh, invigorating glow throughout the body, the brain will become clear, and mental work a pleasure. In addition one of the chief advantages obtained from the rest, is the satisfaction of feeling and looking cool, while other poor motrals wonder how you keep so.

Think of the daily routine of one of your male business friends. In the morning he starts with a good breakfast. About eleven a.m. perhaps, a stiff whiskey and soda, or a beer to cool him, as he thinks, but which really makes him still warmer. If unable to leave office at eleven he generally slips into the club just after twelve noon prior to tiffin. Sometimes he manages to get a drink at eleven and at noon as well if not more. A cocktail probably makes him feel ready for tiffin which is a pretty hefty meal. Tiffin generally consists of meat with vegetables perhaps followed by a sweet and coffee and, in these days, a good sweat before going back to business. The sweat can be usually depended on to accompany our business man back to the office and sometimes throughout the afternoon in spite of the fan. The drinks, meat, coffee were all first class stimulants and heat formers of a high order and such a feeder as our friend can consider himself fortunate if he carries on throughout summer without illness of some sort. A few years of this method of living and the heavy strain tells on the victim's heart and his doctor advises him to slow down. Consider what a saving in time and food cutting out tiffin means in addition to saving of work for several persons. Furthermore the two hours that one used to take up in food can be used for by recreation, mental or physical according to the desires.

Have you ever wondered why that sleepy feeling comes after lunch particularly? You don't feel tired after breakfast, if you have had a fairly good rest during the night, nor do you after dinner, if you get a fair amount of physical exercise during the day. A noted French scientist wrote an article some years ago, in which he stated that at noon the body's powers were at their lowest ebb and to take a meal at such a time was to impose a double strain on the body. He recommended that a good breakfast be taken and an early dinner. It is necessary that this last meal be taken early to get benefit from the two meal plan for the following reason. If you have a late meal too little time elapses between the concluding of that and retiring to bed. During sleep the digestive processes work very slowly and when much undigested food is in the stomach on retiring, the heart is forced to work extra during sleep, when it should have as little work as possible, and in consequence you will wake feeling tired with a disagreeable taste in the mouth together with a cranky feeling which you would be well rid of.

Persons go to bed right away after dinner, say eight-thirty or nine p.m. Apart from a dream or two they would say they slept well, "like a log," and yet they wonder why they are so sleepy next morning and feel as if they went to bed at four a.m. instead of many hours earlier. What was really wanted was a light supper the night before, or if it must be a heavy one then it should have been taken early, at least two hours before bed and a walk taken afterwards as well. Instead of going to bed right after dinner some form of recreation for an hour or so would make one sleep better and get up more refreshed even though one had less sleep.

The person who retires in this way gives his body a real rest which well repays any restraint that may be imposed.

Try, for a week, two meals a day, a good breakfast and dinner but let the latter be taken an hour and a half or two hours before retiring. Take less meat and when partaking of the two meals don't try to eat as much as you used to eat in three—that would be a mistake—rather take less. Less stimulants, as tea, coffee, whiskey, all forms of alcohol etc., together with the two meals a day plan, according to the method described, and you will feel like a boy again, will perspire far less, be more rested and better in every way. Furthermore you'll have no need of the doctor's prescriptions and, to the other advantages will save money in the bills you don't have to pay. Don't believe me, be your own judge.

A Menagerie At Home

By Dr. Wm. A. McKeever
(Professor in the University of Kansas and a Well-Known Educator)

A goat with her bleating kid nearby.
A mother 'poss'm with a pocket full of babies.
A brooder with a bunch of tiny chicks.
A hutch of rabbits, some score or more.
A family of guinea pigs growing too numerous to count.
A pair of white rats.
A purring cat, with a half dozen of her fond young acrobats.
A den of frisky squirrels to sputter and bark at the balance of the circus.

This is the home menagerie which I have found at an ordinary suburban place with two small boys named Jim and Bill acting as general manager and general superintendent respectively. And, with a few square rods of back yard space and a small patch of alfalfa on the side, it looks as if these young animal trainers might carry on indefinitely and at very meagre expense.

Now, what I wish to commend here is the idea of giving children some small opportunity for observing animal behavior, not that every family might be able to keep enough creatures to stock a whole barn yard, like Jim and Bill are doing.

The horse is becoming almost an object of curiosity in the cities and the cow has long been banished to the open country. Even the friendly dog, the best animal chum the small boy has ever known, has eaten his head off or almost vanished to the bone yard on account of Old Hi Cost.

So-called civilisation has thus dealt a crushing blow to the nature of the child as God created and evidently intended it to function. Born with an inherent propensity to climb trees, to scramble over hills and through caverns to wrestle with night winds and dashing waves, to match his cunning with that of world beasts, the child must now be crowded early and permanently into the tame and suppressive artificialism of the city, with "keep off the grass" as the typical rule for his juvenile career.

If we consider the matter from the true standpoint of inherent justice and right, the city is only a little better than a prison to the natural boy.

So my admonition here is that parents having the means and space to provide an amateur menagerie for their children should at least arrange for a pen or two of living creatures as a matter of schooling.

$8,710,000,000 A Year On Luxuries

Tobacco, With $2,200,000,000, Leads—Autos Close Second —Billion For Candy

Washington, July 1.—People of the United States spend $8,710,000,000 for luxuries annually, according to Miss Edith Strauss, head of the Women's Activities Division of the Department of Justice campaign against high living costs. She classes in her luxury list such articles as motor cars, pianos, carpets and "luxurious clothing," in addition to tobacco, candy and soft drinks.

Tobacco leads the list of luxuries Miss Strauss has prepared, and on it the people spend $2,110,000,000 each year. Cigarettes bring $800,000,000, snuff and loose tobacco a like sum, and cigars $510,000,000.

Approximately $2,000,000,000 each year for motor cars and heir parts. Candy makers reap a harvest of $1,000,000,000, and $50,000,000 is spent annually for chewing gum. Soft drinks cost the public $350,000,000; perfumery and cosmetics, $750,000,000; furs, $300,000,000; carpets and "luxurious clothing," $1,500,000,000; toilet soaps $400,000,000, and pianos, organs and phonographs, $250,000,000.

"The labor and capital employed in producing these luxuries might otherwise have been turning out necessities—clothes, fuel shoes, house, food," Miss Strauss finds. "In other words, the Nation might have had more bread if it had had less cake. And, as is always the case, the dancer is paying the fiddler. In this instance the luxury consumer is paying a higher price for his necessities because he is abnormally consuming luxuries."

The statistics were collected by the Treasury Department.

GERMAN DEBT 62 BILLIONS

Berlin, June 30.—Germany's total debt is 265,000,000,000 marks (normally $62,937,500,000), Minister of Finance Wirth announced before the Budget Committee of the Reichstag today.

Red Flags On Cars Cause Riot In Rome

Rome, July 22.—Several persons were killed in the Vittorio Emanuele Square in the course of rioting last evening when tramway men took cars from the depots and drove them through the center of the city flying red flags.

The Socialist Deputy Della Seta was seriously injured when he left the Chamber of Deputies accompanied by several other Socialist members. The Deputy was attacked and roughly handled by a large crowd while proceeding to the office of the newspaper Avanti. Efforts of a soldier to protect him proved futile.

Crowds furiously attacked the cars decorated with flags and many arrests were made.

Attempts to attack the offices of Epoca where the Avanti is being temporarily printed were frustrated.

One officer was wounded and others were attacked in demonstrations by Bolsheviki at Turin seeking revenge for the smashing of machinery at the Avanti plant.
